DUBOEUF'S 1ST PRIZE WINNERS

All from the Great 2009 Beaujolais Vintage

"Consistent in style and amazingly low in price, the myriad Beaujolais bottlings of George Duboeuf continue to represent outstanding values in the American marketplace." – Robert Parker's Wine Advocate 8/31/09

2009 Duboeuf Red

DUBOEUF BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES 2009

Bottle $9⁹⁵ Case $119⁴⁰

39 villages produce wine classified as Beaujolais Villages. Georges and Franck Duboeuf's attractive, cherry-scented wine with its nose of strawberries and blackcurrants shows smoothness and balance. 2009 is a spectacular vintage in the Beaujolais. Serve slightly chilled. (A4720)

DUBOEUF BROUILLY 2009

Bottle $12⁹⁵ Case $155⁴⁰

A more robust and yet flowery wine than some of the other crus. A bouquet of soft fruits, plums and peaches. (A4719)

DUBOEUF CHENAS 1ST PRIZE 2009

Bottle $12⁴⁹ Case $149⁸⁸

Ruby colored with hints of garnet, well structured with a floral, woody bouquet. Quite deep and rich compared to its lighter cousins, Chenas is a great match with roast beef or chicken not to mention BBQ ribs. (A4718)

DUBOEUF CHIROUBLES 2009

Bottle $12⁴⁹ Case $149⁸⁸

Here the rich gamay fruit is more vibrant and we find a little spiciness on the nose. The granite soil imparts some minerality. Brimming with fruit and flowers, it is one of the most individual wines of Beaujolais. (A4717)

DUBOEUF FLEURIE 2009

Bottle $13⁹⁵ Case $167⁴⁰

The production of a vineyard of entirely sandy/granite soil, Fleurie seduces with its velvet smoothness, its elegance and its aroma of flowers and fruits: irises, violets, rose petals, peaches, blackcurrants and red berries. (A4722)

DUBOEUF JULIENAS 1ST PRIZE 2009

Bottle $12⁹⁵ Case $155⁴⁰

The clay soil of Julienas is favorable for the production of rich, powerful and robust wines of ruby red color, a peach and raspberry flavor and a peony aroma. (A4721) entertainment of the season.*

DUBOEUF MORGON 1ST PRIZE 2009

Bottle $11⁹⁵ Case $143⁴⁰

The 'terroir' in Morgon comes from a vineyard full of crumbling stone and schist. With its deep garnet hue and its bouquet of ripe cherries, peaches, apricots and plums, it is a wine which is fruit-luscious when young and more filled with dark cherries and plums after 2 years. (A4716)

DUBOEUF REGNIE 1ST PRIZE 2009

Bottle $10⁴⁹ Case $125⁸⁸

The Cru Regnie is considered to be the most like a Beaujolais Villages with these important differences: more fruit on the nose, more zesty and mouth-filling with a longer finish. A ten minute chill beforehand with a good piece of cheese...delish! (A4713)

DUBOEUF SAINT AMOUR

Robbers Caught

Police, Act on Tip, Thwart Theft of Treasured Windmill

By Dan Rattiner

Late last Saturday evening, you might have seen, if you went strolling around on the streets of downtown East Hampton, what appeared to be employees of the Dawn Structure Moving Company getting ready to haul off the crown jewel of the town—the community's prized windmill in the very center of the town green. The workmen had lifted the windmill eight feet off the ground and had installed railroad ties under it. The windmill blades were lying on the ground, the truck to haul it off had been backed up to it, and the chain was being attached.

But then, the police, acting on a tip, swooped in and arrested the five men who were, as it turned out, not connected to Dawn wearing ski masks.

All five, men from Oakdale, Long Island, are currently in police custody in the Riverhead County Jail awaiting arraignment. They are Ted Fielding, age 45 who was the ringleader, Bob Jones, age 22, Henry Halliday age 27, Doll Jones, age 18 and wife of Bob, and Hank Schwartz, 32. All have been charged with attempted felony theft in the third degree. The panel truck has been impounded, but because of complications involving license and registration, remains alongside the windmill where the attempted heist took place.

The Hook Pond Windmill was a tempting target for several reasons. One is that that the REAL Dawn Structure Moving Company had been hired to haul it away to be repaired, two was that Dawn had already put it high up on the railroad ties where it was ready to go, three is because of the fact there is a robust market for old English windmills and four is that, historically, nearly all the windmills in the Hamptons have actually been moved around from place to place, some of them numerous times, since their construction around 1750.

there's a robust market for old English windmills.*

Structure Moving, but were instead in the act of stealing the windmill.

The action began about 11 p.m. The vehicle, actually an old panel truck painted up to look like the Dawn Structure Moving Company truck, arrived at that hour. Five men got out. Two worked as lookouts. One man began hooking the windmill up with a chain and hook, and two other men brought out the car axle and wheels for rolling it away. And then the police arrived. The robbers were caught in the act, and although very careful to have painted their old panel truck to exactly resemble the Dawn truck, they all made the very singular mistake of Dan Rattiner's second memoir, IN THE HAMPTONS TOO: Further Encounters with Farmers, Fishermen, Artists, Billionaires and Celebrities, is now available in hardcover wherever books are sold. The first memoir, IN THE HAMPTONS, published by Random House, is now available in paperback. The author will read from IN THE HAMPTONS TOO on Saturday, July 31 at 11 a.m. at the Georgica Pond rest stop, Montauk Highway, east of Wainscott Stone Road; Sunday, August 1 at 11 a.m. at Citarella's Market in Bridgehampton.

Throw Something! Win a Trip to Portugal

This story first appeared in Dan's Papers on August 2, 1991

By Dan Rattiner

One of the most unusual events ever to be held on eastern Long Island is surely the Dan's Papers Flight to Portugal, scheduled to take place on the grounds of the Montauk Lighthouse on Saturday August 10. Entrants—and you are welcome to become one—will throw gliders or other devices of their own creation off the cliff of the lighthouse 80 feet above the rocks and the sea, in an effort to win a free, one week vacation for two in Portugal. The United States Coast Guard will be patrolling around offshore, volunteers from the Grumman Aerospace Corporation will be manning computers in the lighthouse itself to track the launches, and the person who can launch a glider the farthest off into the sea to the east toward Portugal will win the first prize. Festivities are expected to begin around 10 in the morning and will run all day with the awarding of the prize at four in the afternoon. There are several other prizes and free gifts for ALL entrants, but more about that later. To enter your glider, all you have to do is send $10 cash or by check to Dan's Papers, Main Street, Bridgehampton. You could also stop by our offices next to the Bridgehampton IGA. Checks are made out to Dan's Papers and this entire project is a benefit for the Montauk Historical Society erosion control project on the cliff face of the Lighthouse. When you enter, you give your name, address and phone number and you will receive a launch time and a list of rules. At this juncture, one week before this event, there's a lot we can report we have lined up for that day. Jim Turner and his band will entertain between launches beginning at 11 a.m. There will be a food wagon on hand serving hot dogs and drinks. The WLNG double decker bus will be there to act as a platform for the master of ceremonies. Bring a blanket or lawn chair to sit on. You will have an excellent view of the launches. If you are an entrant, be there at least one half hour before your launch time. Objects to be launched must be 24" in length or longer, must float for five minutes or more and be heavier than air. Propellers and rubber bands are allowed on board the gliders but there can be no gasoline engines or other forms of propulsion. There can also be nothing remote controlled. We've worked these rules out pretty carefully. Call us and learn more about them.

First prize is a free vacation for one week in Portugal, courtesy of the Portuguese National Tourist Office and TAP, the Airline of Portugal. Second prize is a piece of beautiful Portuguese porcelain from Ilhavo, Portugal worth about $600. Third prize is a three liter bottle of vintage Portuguese Taylor and Fladgate Port from the Douro Region of Portugal, courtesy of Kobrand Importers of Manhattan. And fourth prize is a case of Portuguese table wine from the Portuguese National Tourist Office. The prize for the winning entry in the children's division, 12 and under, is $100 donated by the Montauk Boatmen's and Captain's Association. The top ten adult entries will each receive a bottle of

Excess is Back

Two Week Summer Rental for Half a Mill, & Other Stories

By Dan Rattiner

Well, at least as far as the Hamptons go, there is now the light at the end of the tunnel. Excess is back. I haven't seen it lurking around since the summer of 2008. But here's the evidence.

Last Wednesday I was with some friends and they started to talk about this new restaurant in the Hamptons, well, not a restaurant exactly, but a sort of restaurant.

It is called DISH and it is somewhere in Water Mill, and how you find out about it is to be told about it by a friend. There's a website. And you can join up.

DISH serves dinner starting at 6 p.m. four nights a week. They have 16 seats. And there is only one seating. If you join up online and they accept you, you can make a reservation online and only online either on Monday or the days before that for the upcoming Friday. They are open Thursday through Sunday. The cost is not great. It's a four-course meal, and it's only $52 per person. Beverage is extra of course. It is also BYOB.

"They are really small courses," our friend said. "But they are really good, and there are six of them. Also, they don't have a choice. You get to eat whatever it is they serve on the evening you have your reservations for. But you do learn about it ahead of time. You get the menu on Wednesday. And it's all spelled out. They send you the night you reserved for. They also e-mail you the menu for the other two nights they are open that weekend. So you get three menus. And from that point on, you get the three menus every Wednesday whether you have a reservation or not. So it's always in your mind.

"Two weeks ago on a Monday, we asked if we could make a reservation for 12 two weeks ahead on a Friday. We wanted to rent out the whole place. They said sure. So we sent out our invitations. Everybody wanted to go of course.

"But then, when the menu for that night came on the Wednesday, I found out they were serving pork loin for the main course. We have one per-

PIPING PLOVERS FAIL TO CROSS THE ROAD

By Dan Rattiner

Two piping plover chicks were allegedly run over by a four wheel drive beach buggy last Wednesday along a sand road at Robert Moses State Park on Fire Island. At a press conference, authorities used the word "allegedly" because there were no witnesses to the crime.

"They were found in the tire treads," U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologist Steve Papa said. "The chicks were about a week old, so they'd be a couple inches long."

It seemed unlikely they had died while crossing a previously made tire tread someone noted. It seemed more likely that the chicks had died on the road where there were no tire tracks, and the tire tracks happened at the time of the catastrophe.

"The mother plover must have been leading them down to a feeding grounds at Democrat Point," Papa said.

Fishermen have used this sand road for hundreds of years to go through the dunes down to a favorite surfcasting spot at Democrat Point. But because these were piping plovers rather than any other creature—which when killed by a car are described just as "road kill," with nobody giving a damn—the authorities have sprung into action. There are many endangered species in Suffolk County. But piping plovers, very cute creatures, have special status.

The day after the "accident," the road was closed off indefinitely and a fence 650 feet long erected, blocking all of Democrat Point to not only beach traffic but to pedestrian traffic as well.

Many federal agencies have been mobilized to deal with this situation and perhaps to find the perpetrator or perpetrators. This was your classic squash and run.

Not only has the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service been mobilized, but so have teams from the N. Y.

Tornado!

Second One in Last 50 Yrs. Cuts Swath Through Springs

By Dan Rattiner

On Wednesday evening, July 21, around 7:30 p.m., a tornado ripped through a small section of the Hamptons tearing down trees, destroying chimneys and rooftops, downing power lines and otherwise, since it was the dinner hour, scaring the daylights out of everybody. The twister was first reported by the National Weather Service at 7:10 p.m. over Long Island Sound heading south from southern Connecticut where it had formed as high winds and pouring rain. On the Sound, some saw it as a rainspout in the sky over the water at that time, which was just before sunset. The Weather Service declared it an official tornado after that, and tracked it over North Haven and Sag Harbor but then did report that it had not touched the ground. A few minutes later, it did touch, hitting the ground in Springs, causing tremendous damage just south of Maidstone Park, along Woodbine Avenue, Gardiner's Avenue and Fort Pond Boulevard.

The swath it created was about a half mile wide and four miles long. On its shoulders, in both directions north and south, high winds and pouring rain caused lesser damage. There were no injuries though.

This is only the second time in my lifetime here in the Hamptons that a tornado has struck eastern Long Island. On August 10, 1990 at 11:00 in the evening, a tornado hit the southern end of Three Mile Harbor, then skipped west and touched down again at downtown Bridgehampton. In the darkness at that hour, my wife and I actually saw the inside of it. We were in bed at the time. A skylight is on the roof over the bed. And so we watched the view through the skylight, for about three minutes, during which time it turned into what looked exactly like the insides of a churning commercial sized washing machine. The house shook. Then that view was gone.

In the morning, we found that the chimney of the house had been knocked off the roof. Many trees were down and in the backyard and where one particular tree still stood, there was not a trace of the elaborate tree house I had built about eight feet up in it. The only other damage, besides a few trees here and there, was the loss of the entire roof of Story's Three Mile Harbor Marina across the street, which got lifted off in its entirety and flung God knows where. After that, the tornado left the ground. Neither the tree house or the roof were ever found.

Then the tornado struck Bridgehampton. It set down right on Main Street just to the west of what is today Starbucks, and, churning around and tearing up all the trees, it headed west down the white line toward New York City, for a distance of three blocks, finally taking off just at the corner of Butter Lane about 100 yards to the east of the Dan's Papers office. On its way, in addition to the trees, it destroyed

REAL STORY OF WHAT HAPPENED TO TIGER

By Dan Rattiner

Tiger Woods played golf last week in the sixth major tournament since the conclusion of his brief five month absence from the sport, and he once again turned in a ho-hum performance. No running in the pack for three days and then blowing out all the competition with amazing shots on the last day. No just running away from everybody from the get-go.

He was just out there, hitting good and bad shots just like the rest of them, often with a worried expression on his face.

Before he just fades off into the woodwork with a long series of future performances such as these, I should like to comment on what has happened to him. If he just fades away, it will be bad for golf, bad for the public who love to watch him and bad for him as well. Also, at 34 he should be too young to fade away. Golfers reach their prime usually in their late 30s or early 40s.

The game of winning golf requires a tremendous amount of skill, precision, focus, pure animal aggression and luck. The luck comes from the genes. If you are small and weak, you will not hit the ball far. If you are big and strong and make the most of that, you will—provided you remain completely confident and focused—be able to win a great deal of the time. Anybody who plays the game of golf knows that for a tip top game all these things are true.

Until now, however, no one, not even Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus or Sammy Snead has been able to do what Woods has done. In a world of fierce competition and hundreds of competitors, he was able to finish first a huge percentage of the time. It was amazing.

Woods trained as hard as an Olympic athlete to do what he did. He's played every day. (He's been doing that since age six). He lifts weights. He has a fiercely loyal entourage around him, and if one of them says anything bad to anybody about him, he fires them instantly—not, I believe because he doesn't like them, but because dealing mentally with this sort of thing distracts him from his focus and determination. He doesn't drink or smoke. And he behaves like a rock star. Women follow rock stars around all the time. For rock stars and movie stars it's okay to fool around. And it's even okay for many sports figures. Read Wilt Chamberlain's autobiography. If true, he set a world's record in that department. And nobody cares.

Golf became easy pickings for Woods. Golf is played, even at the very top levels (until Woods came along) by people who are most comfortable in an easy-does-it environment. The sport has encouraged this. It is moral and family oriented. Someone who espouses the homey values of a Regis Philbin are encouraged and revered. Consider this—the winner of the U. S. Open gets to wear a yellow smoking jacket. It's just a game, after all. No rock star training here.

When Woods played, the ratings went through the roof. And the money he got paid for this accomplishment was well earned.

But then came the revelations. How many women stepped forward to say that they had slept with Tiger Woods? Fourteen? That they did this was just for a few bucks that the tabloids paid them. Tiger's silence about this only made it worse. What could he say? No it never happened? He had had this altercation with his wife in the middle of the night. Everybody knew.

And so, suddenly, Woods was no longer playing this game in the manner that was expected of him.

In this Regis Philbin culture, such behavior simply is not done. As a result, after getting advice from every side about what to do, Woods went into a sex clinic to have his attitude re-adjusted to the prevailing Christian ethic. He came out. He apologized. He came clean. He was sorry. And that was the end of Woods—because in the end, his wife said she and the children would stay with him if he went into the sex rehab and came out the other side, but then when he came out all spiffed and shined up, she said she didn't like him anyway.

It is a result of this, I say, that caused Wood's fire to go out.

Before his "troubles," he'd say before a four day tournament "I have to win this thing. If I don't win it, I am disappointed." Since his troubles, he says "I just want to be able to play well. It's a pleasure to compete with so many other talented competitors."

And so, Tiger the tiger, the rampaging beast, the man who makes impossible golf shots one after the other, is reduced to ordinariness, just like the golf played by all the other shlubs. Including me.

On the green, you look at the cup and you look at the ball and you are supposed to do nothing else except, like a surveyor, figure out how to get the one into the other. Consider the grass. Wet? Dry? Long? Short? Consider the direction of the grain of the grass. Consider the slope of the land, consider the wind direction and strength. Then consider focus, will, determination and balance. Insist on silence. Putt. No wait. And so, errant thoughts enter the mind.

There are thoughts of the fender bender his kid just had, or thoughts about how with that last shot I think I have finally figured out this game should be played and I am going to be a star, or there are thoughts about the little bumblebee flying around.

Putt. Oh crap.

What's left with Woods is all on the old videos. Thus it is, and you could see this in video of some of the amazing shots he made last year. Here is one in his fourth round charge to victory in his most recent victorious tournament and you can do nothing but marvel at the level of play.

He is off to the right. The ball has plugged into some mud. He has to hit over some trees, between two giant sand traps and onto a narrow strip of a green. He hits. The ball lands one foot from the cup. It just knocks your socks off.

I believe, as do many others, that Woods needs to find himself a woman whom he finds son in our party who is a vegetarian. So I asked if, for that person, they could make a vegetarian dish.

"They said they only served the pork loin that night. That was it. And if we couldn't do it, well, we couldn't do it. So our party of 12 got cancelled and we had dinner somewhere else.

"But the funny thing is that after that they took me off the mailing list."

On Saturday night, we went to the Bay Street Gala under a tent that ran almost the whole length of Long Wharf, Sag Harbor.

There were lots of people there, and there was lots of money raised, both with a silent auction in a sort of lobby tent where they had items displayed on tables along with clipboards where you could write in your bid—and also just after the main course in the big tent, but before the dessert.

At that time, Richard Kind, who is the actor in Larry David's TV show "Curb Your Enthusiasm" stood up on a platform with a microphone and asked us to open our programs and have a look at seven items that they were going to have sell in a live auction one at a time.

There was lots to read about each item. One was a week at a condo in the Caribbean complete with car and spa privileges. Another was a cruise on a yacht for a week in the Mediterranean. Each item had a starting price of about $4,000 or more, and the bidding was spirited and went up and up and up.

One item was for a dinner for two at a very fancy restaurant in New York City that for the purposes of this article shall remain nameless. The starting price for this item was $4,000.

There was a great description of the place, a picture of it and a listing of some of the awards that the great chef there had earned. At the end, a note said this: "This award is only good for the reservation. The food and beverage consumed by the winning party must be paid for additionally. Also the award is only available to be used on Wednesday and before December 1, 2010."

Strangely, there were no bids put up for this item. After all, this was a pretty smart group we had here under the tent. Nevertheless, there it was—$4,000 minimum just for the reservation. People took note.

The last item I would like to tell you about occupied the entire upper half of page 5 of the New York Post the following Monday.

"500Gs FOR RO-MANCE" the headline read. "HUBBY-HUNTRESS HITS HAMPTONS" read the sub-head.

Turns out that a well-to-do Florida woman has rented a 14-bedroom, 16-bathroom mansion on 12 acres in Bridgehampton for two weeks for $500,000. That's $1,488 an hour I can tell you, because the reporters at the New York Post did the math.

Why is this woman doing this? She's looking for a husband.

"The dating pool is much better here than in Florida," said Cheryl Mercuris, who is from Tampa. "There are just so many career-oriented people here, unlike the west coast of Florida, which is very quiet and laid-back—not great for someone who is single and raising a child."

There's a picture of Mercuris. She's blonde and beautiful and appears to be in her mid 40s. She sits on a gold club chair next to a round gold side table with crystal globes on it. She holds a cuddly white dog in her lap.

The rental begins this week.

But Mercuris is not just some usual middle aged divorcee.

"People probably think I'm divorced, spending my ex-husband's money," she said. "I'm proud that I made my own money. It's so uncommon. I like the fact that I'm a self-made woman."

Mercuris owns Quality Resources, a shopping service, which she founded in 1992 with 10 employees and now does millions of dollars worth of business on television. Four hundred people work for her.

"I'm not on a mission," she told the Post reporter about her quest for a man. "If it's meant to be, it will happen."

The house is known locally as the Sandcastle, it is on the market for $49.5 million and sits on 12 acres of landscaped land. There is a two-lane bowling alley, a rock-climbing wall, a professional spa and horseback riding on the property. You get around on a golf cart.

"I love everything about the Hamptons," she said. "It's a kid's wonderland."

She's here with her parents, her 6-year-old son and a nephew of about the same age. She also owns an apartment in the Time Warner Center in Manhattan if she wants to kick around in the city for a few days.

She intends to spend her time at celebrity restaurants, fundraisers and other events and hobnob with the rich and famous. She mentioned hedge fund managers and lawyers.

Anyway, mind your manners, it's come back. That hamburger, you shout, is HOW much?

Sag Honor

Three Spots in Intimate Village Rely on Honor System

By Susan M. Galardi

Like any newcomer to any area who knows nothing about the ways of anybody, I decided the traffic situation in Sag Harbor had to be changed immediately. The octopus intersection near the wharf where Main, Wharf and Bay Streets converge needed to be at least a roundabout, if not festooned with a big honking traffic light.

You drive through town on Main Street, heading to the wharf to fish or get ice cream, and right near the flag pole the road breaks into four lanes: Left-left; left; straight-right; right. Just heading into that spot, there are 10 directional arrows painted on the street and two stop signs.

In the meantime, there are cars coming across Long Island Avenue (from the Post Office) have to cut across Main Street and push into one of the lines you're in if they want to go onto the wharf or east on Bay Street to 114.

So there you are, sitting in one of those four lanes on Main Street. If want to go right toward Provisions, that's pretty easy—unless a car coming off the bridge is going there too. Since that car has already stopped once and is going straight, it has the right of way, whatever the right of way is. If you want to go straight, onto the wharf, you still have to watch for the bridge traffic from the west as well as the cars from Bay Street on the east.

Turning left out of town toward the bridge puts you into a friendly game of chicken. You have two more challenges: First, you have to stop again to yield to bridge traffic. Second, you have to deal with cars coming off of the wharf from the north that may be going straight, left or right. Who will stop for whom?

Heading into town from Bay Street and wanting to make a left on Main puts you in a similar situation. You have to stop twice—once at the sign in front of the Bay Street Theatre, and again about 30 yards later if you plan to turn into town. It really puts you on your toes, hoping and guessing that other drivers have positioned themselves in the right lane and are using the correct turn signal.

And then there are pedestrians.

When I was a visitor to Sag Harbor, I could put up with this mishegas. But once I moved there, driving through town at least twice a

SCARY FARMERS MARKET THREATENED

By Matthew Ianno

A farmers market is about the least intimidating creation in the history of the civilization. Nothing within the innocuous title "Farmers Market" suggests any malignity or threat—in fact, the title suggests just the opposite. One will find fruit, vegetables, cheese, fish, shellfish, nuts, jellies, pies, bread, juices, wines, and other locally raised/created commodities at a farmers market. These markets are a pleasing and sometimes preferred alternative to large supermarkets and produce stores. Shopping at a farmers market means supporting the local economy and receiving fresh goods; a scenario that proves prudent for both parties involved.

The farmers market in East Hampton is currently operating for its fifth straight year next to Nick & Toni's restaurant on North

Main Street. The restaurant allows the market to run on its property for free as a form of public service. However, the East Hampton Town Board and Supervisor Bill Wilkinson announced last week that they were holding meetings to discuss the future of the market. It appears the board is concerned because the farmers market is operating on the restaurant's grounds, which they say is not allowed because it is expanding the commercial use of the property; meaning a commercial program cannot operate on preexisting commercial grounds. But Farmers Market manager Kate Plumb told me, "The attorney said there's no legal reason why we can't continue on at Nick & Toni's."

So if there's no legal reason for the market to close according to an attorney, but the board is saying that the market is breaching some sort of commercial code, what exactly is going on and why is the board so concerned with this market? It is a farmers market, not a head shop or a WalMart. It sells veggies and pies, not cocaine or guns. It benefits the community in every way, and the Board should feel blessed that the community has an asset like the market.

Of course the board is adamant in vocalizing its support for the market and willingly attests to its importance, but they saw a potential legal matter, no matter how miniscule, so they began contemplating a shut down or a move. Two things seem to be operating here. One is the tremendous amount of free time the East Hampton Town Board must have to spend time on such issues in the face of more pressing issues; the other is

On Aug. 8, Dan Rattiner will read a "Victor Szymanski," a chapter from his new book In the Hamptons Too, at the Bridgehampton Citarella. The chapter chronicles the story of Dan's friendship with the restaurateur and amateur carpenter/electrician who literally built his own restaurant. Victor owned the only restaurant in the Hamptons ever to be torn down for building violations. Sun., August 1, 11 a.m., Citarella Market, Bridgehampton.

the nonsensical ways in which they spend this time. In its four years of operation prior to 2010, this farmers market has never been met with opposition. Shutting it down means jeopardizing the incomes of local farmers and small businesses—not a popular strategy in this community, where farming has been a way of life for generations. The board will meet to finalize a decision on the market on August 5.

Regardless of whether or not the Board follows through with its closure or relocation of the market to uphold a law that seemingly doesn't exist, this entire debacle raises a question about its intentions. A farmers market is a stronghold of a community, a healthy resource in a community filled with farmers and fishermen. It is also a place for locals and like minded visitors to gather, socialize, exchange and partake in each other's lives and well being. This is where the fisherman meets the farmer and the winemaker meets the pie baker, and together they all meet the consumer.

Nick & Toni's restaurant is kind and wise enough to allow the market to flourish on its property, with the only potential monetary benefit to the restaurant being the proximity the market has to its doors. This is a peaceful relationship between the restaurant, local businesses, sellers and buyers, and it provides no disservice to any party involved. So why did the board even entertain the thought of discontinuing this peaceful, productive, and popular aspect of East Hampton livelihood? Because, as Councilwoman Theresa Quigley put it, "it's an inappropriate use of the location."

Inappropriate how? The farmers market was able to operate the past four years because the previous Town Board granted them the mass gathering permit that allows them to operate. When the market applied for the same permit this year the board denied them and the primary reason is because of what Quigley and fellow board members deemed an, "inappropriate use of land."

One might say the East Hampton Town Board is displaying an inappropriate use of time and taxpayers money. But the issue may span beyond that, and for now we must wait and see just how far it spans. This may be a case of flawed logic, but is this flaw fixable or is it intrinsically imbedded in the new board's decision making? They've already struck out with their ideas to sell off town properties considered to be invaluable by the community. There seems to be a tremendous disconnect here. The Board should become reacquainted with its constituents—perhaps by visiting a local farmers market.

State Park Commission and the Office of Parks, Recreation and Historic Preservation, which has opened an investigation. Plaster of Paris casts have been made of the tire tracks. The distance between the left and right tracks have been measured. Hopefully, this will lead to an identification of this vehicle and from there to the perpetrator of this dastardly deed.

"Knowing now that the birds might take their chicks down to Democrat Point to feed on the shore bugs," said biologist Papa, "you can't have off-road vehicle access right there."

Apparently, wherever piping plovers roam is to be roped off and festooned with no trespassing signs. This is a new level of aggressive activity from the authorities as they move with determination, and with federal government approval, in seeing that these endangered piping plovers lead long and stress free lives.

The piping plovers' special status has sometimes been challenged by members of the general public who are often greatly inconvenienced by the plover situation. The government attitude may be that the polar bears die off when the ice melts, the lobsters fail to reproduce because of a rise in the sea temperature, people die of heat stroke and dogs collapse in the superheated air. But when civilization dies out, the piping plovers will live on, a shining example of what the human race can do in this one case.

There are literally thousands of endangered species on the beaches in the Hamptons. Beer cans wash up on the shore, acres of white Styrofoam packing pellets float by on the ocean's surface, partially deflated helium party balloons wave gaily on the sand and globs of oil come washing ashore to join Coca Cola six pack plastic holders wrapped around the necks of dead, but unprotected, common seagulls, but not a feather on the piping plovers' heads shall be mussed. As for this incident, hundreds of agents are now working around the clock to solve this "piping plover in the wheel track" crime.

The regional director of the Long Island State Parks Ronald Foley does find the present situation worrisome.

"These fences effectively close off more than just that area," he told reporters "because it's the route that off-road vehicles would take to the bay side."

On the other hand, the surfcasters themselves seem to be taking a more fatalistic view of things.

"I've heard a couple of complaints but nothing serious yet," Foley continued.

Steve Vallone of the Mid-Island Surfcasters club told Newsday "we lost a lot of access to surfcasting spots earlier this year because of erosion from spring storms. It's a big to-do."

The surfcasters, it seems, just take it as it comes.

It is not clear what punishment awaits the surfcaster who did this dastardly act. Along the Fire Island barrier beach in the western part of Suffolk County, where Robert Moses State Park is, the killing of a piping plover, whether on purpose or by accident, is not treated as a capital offense.

Here on eastern Long Island, it is a different matter entirely. Earlier this year, in an unrelated incident, a surfcaster accidentally drove his beach buggy, which had a brake problem, through a snow fence and killed an adult piping plover in the roped off area. He didn't flee the scene or try to cover his tracks—and this was a big mistake—because when he turned himself in, he was immediately handcuffed, blindfolded and shot dead by the government firing squad. His eyeballs were later fed to the piping plover family that he had violated.

On another occasion, in Hither Hills, when a man's golden retriever began batting around a piping plover egg, the owner had to take responsibility for the chick. In this case, the chick was hatched with something of a staggering-around balance problem as a result of this incident, and the owner had to pay for rehab, massage therapy, a full time nurse and a tiny wheelchair and attendant for the rest of the plover's natural life, which turned out to be two and a half years. The perp also had to pay to provide psychiatric help to the parents of the plover for the mental anguish and trauma they suffered.

Also under consideration this session in the Suffolk County Legislature is a bill that would make it a crime for not only humans, but any other creatures, whether bird, fish, mammal or lizard, to attack or even frighten a piping plover.

The matter is being held up in committee for the moment while the legislature considers whether or not to also make it a crime for other endangered species to attack (or frighten) piping plovers.

We will keep on top of this important breaking story.

Whispers

With Gina Glickman

Have you heard? Martha's moving! But she's not moving out of her Lily Pond estate in East Hampton. She's moving "The Martha Stewart Show," to its new home on The Hallmark Channel, starting September 13. "It's time for a change and I am very excited. Syndicated TV isn't easy," admitted Stewart. Unlike its existing arrangement, where TV channels decide when to broadcast "The Martha Stewart Show," The Hallmark Channel will air the show at 10 a.m. each day, and rerun it multiple times, allowing extra opportunities to sell commercial spots. Stewart told me, "I'm looking forward to having a real home."

The multiple James Beard Award-winner was honored this past Saturday evening, by The James Beard Foundation at Chefs & Champagne® New York, the foundation's annual summer fundraiser at Wölffer Estate Vineyard, for her influence on the culinary arts. According to Wölffer's winemaker and general manager Roman Roth, "Back in the early '90s Martha was the only one to support local, Long Island vineyards in her magazines and on her TV show." Immediately after the official ceremony, Stewart addressed the crowd and delivered two engaging speeches. The media giant was a good sport and posed for hundreds of candid fan photos, including one complex shot that had Martha surrounded by more than 30 participating fine chefs. At one point, Stewart revealed her playful, humorous side and called out, "Okay, ready everyone? Smile!" According to the JBF, this year's annual event was the best turnout ever, thanks to Stewart's dedicated appearance and generous donation to the VIP gift bag, which included a hard cover copy of Martha Stewart's Dinner at Home: 52 Quick Meals to Cook for Family and Friends. Stewart's daughter Alexis, with Jennifer Koppelman Hutt, Sirius XM's "Whatever" hosts, will launch an hour-long topical and humorous talk show, executive-produced by writer and director David Steinberg, which will air at 11 a.m. daily. There will be a studio audience and the home audience will be engaged through call-in and Skype-ing opportunities.

This Saturday afternoon, July 31, is the motherlode of charity events: the 13th Annual Super Saturday to benefit the Ovarian Cancer Research Fund at Nova's Ark Project in Water Mill from 1 to 6 p.m., with a special preview hour beginning at noon for VIP ticket holders. Get ready to shop alongside celebrity co-hosts Ashley Greene of Twilight, Kelly Ripa, Donna Karan and Ariel Foxman for some serious bargains from more than 200 luxe brands, including Giorgio Armani, Louis Vuitton, Stella McCartney, Emilio Pucci and Tory Burch, who will offer major discounts to help raise funds to fight ovarian cancer. This year, Bravo reality star, Celebrity Stylist Rachel Zoe, is back with her "Designers A to Zoe" booth packed with handpicked frocks that will feature luxury designers such as Chloe, Derek Lam, Giuseppe Zanotti, Judith Leiber, Kara Ross, Oscar de la Renta, Stella McCartney and Temperley London. Ripa has graciously lent her name and hosted Super Saturday for the past six years, and told me she finds the event very inspiring. "When you attend most any cancer event you look forward to meeting survivors. I have to admit, a few years back at this event there weren't any survivors. So obviously the money raised here, and other events like this, are really funding research and it has to be doing well because I am meeting more and more survivors every year! Which makes us feel like we are all here and shopping, but we feel like we are doing and achieving something."

Barbara Walters, who came out to support the cause last year alongside Rudy and Judith Giuliani, takes it very seriously: "This is a very important event. Ovarian cancer is a deadly killer. I have members of my own family who have died from ovarian cancer and it needs more research. The fact that this gets larger every year means that they will perhaps find a cure for this awful disease." On a lighter note, Walters also pointed out hunting for bargains can be useful during the holidays: "You can do a lot of shopping and get ahead on your Christmas presents. It's a happy day, but most of all an important day." Zoe, who brought her niece last year, reminds us this is the perfect event for kids of any age, and told me, "It is a fun family day. There is something to do for everybody! There will be rides, games and arts and crafts."

Plus, this summer at Camp Divalysseious, kids will experience special performances and activities including face painting, balloon artistry, s'more making and decorating musical instruments and picture frames. At the Success for Kids tent, adults and kids can create their very own books on "What the World Looks Like At Its Best," and personalize T-shirts alongside graffiti artist Andre Charles. The best part is that kids under five are free! To purchase tickets, call 212-759-2800, ext. 22. Remember, ALL the proceeds go to the OCFR, so it is truly shopping for a worthy cause. If nothing else, Ripa says it best, "You never know when you may need the research. God forbid; I hope nobody here ever does, but statistically some of us will! So, let's shop!"

Gina Glickman is a TV Host, Director, Writer, Executive Producer and founder of GMG Entertainment. Look out for Gina hosting the brand new Entertainment and Lifestyle Series "In The Mixx" on Hamptons Magazine TV!

Before taking the stage at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center last weekend, Cyndi Lauper accepted artwork from Galerie BelAge. The gallery honored Lauper for her work with New York City's gay, lesbian and transgender youth.

East Hampton's Martha Stewart was honored at the James Beard Foundation's Chefs & Champagne gala last Saturday. The exclusive event was held at Wölffer Estate Vineyard in Sagaponack.

Southampton hotspot OSO, located at Southampton Inn, received the 2010 Award of Excellence by Wine Spectator Magazine for their extensive wine program. Executive chef Bryan Naylor has carefully hand-picked a selection of over 150 wines for the restaurant that complement the cuisine.

Surrounding Saturday's opening for the Hamptons great American pop artist, Larry Rivers, Vered Gallery is hosting Artists 4 Israel, who have constructed a special interactive installation. On Sunday, there will be a benefit brunch for The Museum of Jewish Heritage: A Living Memorial to the Holocaust. Vered Gallery is commemorating the Fifth Anniversary of the Disengagement, which occurred in August of 2005. Expected to attend is the Israeli Ambassador.

Long Island psychic Mary Occhino, host of the Sirius Radio show "Angels On Call," is the subject of a new reality show on the SyFy channel. Episode 10 was shot at The Old Mill Inn in Mattituck where Occhino encountered resident ghost, Mrs. Holmes, and a slew of other ghosts. The episode is expected to run in September.

NASCAR racer Jeff Gordon had lunch with his wife and daughter Thursday at Indian Wells Tavern in Amagansett.

Mark Feuerstein from "Royal Pains" and his wife Dana were at Rowdy Hall in East Hampton, Friday evening enjoying dinner outside in the courtyard.

Cinema Society founder Andrew Saffir dined with Judy Licht at Navy Beach in Montauk on Thursday.

Rev. Run of Run DMC was picking up barbecue from Townline BBQ in Sagaponack on Sunday night.

Billy Baldwin picked up some pizzas to go at Serafina in East Hampton on Thursday evening. While waiting for his food he chatted up some girls at the bar and posed for photos with fans.

The Hook Mill in East Hampton was actually constructed originally at Hook Pond. It has been moved three times. But it really was thought that its last move, to its present location in the center of town, would be its last.

It has been on the Town Green since 1806.

At the present time, there are 15 windmills, all built to almost identical specifications in the 18th and 19th centuries to grind corn into flour, located in the Hamptons, many of them in public places so the populace can best enjoy their beauty. The collection of 15 windmills in the 60 mile length of the Hamptons is the largest collection of English windmills in the country.

The tip that the police got at 10:30 at night was provided to them by executives from the Dawn Structure Moving Company who had seen what appeared to be one of their trucks on the site around dinner time. Realizing that their plan was to haul the windmill off the following day, the executives began checking their computerized records to see if the project had not perhaps moved ahead.

"We move numerous homes and barns and other structures every week from Bay Shore to Montauk," Harry Dawn, the CEO of Dawn said. "We had no crew over there that night. We called the police."

The Dawn executives are also looking into a big mansion on the south side of Parsonage Lane in Sagaponack, which currently resides 100 yards off the road on railroad ties in the middle of a potato field.

"We think that is not supposed to be there either," Dawn said. "We have no record of the move."

Police say that about a month ago, a Water Mill family came out for the weekend to find their house gone. They reported it to the police. They were pretty upset about it.

"The house was reported missing from Towd-Mecox Road about a month ago," said police chief Barnstable. "We've had no clues to its whereabouts until today. But then today, during our daily beating of the prisoners, we received a confession from the ring-leader of this current group, a Mr. Fielding, that yes, that was their doing and the sign on the side reading DAWN MOVERS was from their sign painting guy, who I must say does a really good job. We were told the heist had gone bad when the guy who was supposedly buying it didn't come up with the dough. So they just left it to rot in the field."

The investigation continues. "Anybody who sees a house or a barn or any other structure which has recently appeared or disappeared from some property in a suspicious manner, please call 911 and someone will be on the scene in minutes," said the Chief.

The general public should realize that stealing a historic windmill is a federal crime, punishable by 12 years in the slammer and pretty hefty fines. Most windmills from that era go for about 200,000 smackers. This is not pocket change.

Voters Think Twice about Supervisor Election

By T.J. Clemente

There's been a very public movement emanating from Montauk in the voice of one Gloria Prager, to recall votes for East Hampton Town Supervisor William Wilkinson, and Board Member Theresa Quigley.

Being an incumbent has a price. Every decision you make most likely will cost you a vote or two in the next election. Running against an unpopular supervisor is easy because you get the people voting for you and your proposed changes, as well as those voting against the status quo.

Last year I said that the Republicans could run a school bus for East Hampton supervisor and win. Well they ran Bill Wilkinson and he won handsomely. He was given a tall order: fix a town that had a confidence problem and revenue stream problems that lead to huge budget deficits (perhaps $20 million), and do it while the nation was surfing the worst economic downturn since the Great Depression. But the $20 million question remains: Was Wilkinson elected to change everything or to bring everything back to the way it was before McGintee supposedly screwed things up? Did they really vote to cut town jobs and town services? Did they really crave the selling off of town assets, or did those voters just want to punish the Democrats in office presiding over property values dropping by double digit percentages as taxes rising in double digit percentages?

No one wants to be perceived as arrogant, the word the recall movement people seem to be hurling at Wilkinson these days. He believes he's doing what he said he'd do—restoring fiscal sanity to the town and getting a handle on taxes by stopping their increase and maybe even lowering them. He told me, "I will not ever vote for a tax increase." And he conceded that, "It's all on my desk now."

What I think they've forgotten at Town Hall is that, with a two-year election cycle, you don't get time to rest on your victory. You are in effect always running for re-election. In short, you have to avoid unpopular decisions while doing the right things. Board members get four years to out last the sting of unpopular decisions—the supervisor doesn't have that luxury.

In Southampton, I believe the "Tuckahoe Main Street" development poses a huge danger to the new Supervisor Anna Thorne-Holst who, it seems, doesn't completely understand that the voters in that area don't want that kind of change. With so many yes people surrounding both Supervisors Throne-Holst and Wilkinson, who in their inner circles have the guts to tell their boss that he or she is wrong?

Right now both supervisors still feel bullet-proof due to the margin of their victories. But were the victories votes of confidence on what they planned to do, or votes of no confidence on what was being done? The next vote Wilkinson and Throne-Holst face will be based on what they have done, or didn't do.

Richard Nixon used to say, "It's not easy to be in the arena." He said this most frequently after being forced to resign, not following his election with 68% of the vote. My brother and

Voters wanted Wilkinson & Quigley in, then out

I stood six feet away from Nixon on election night at the Shoreham Hotel in D.C., convinced he was invincible. In three years he resigned, waving as he boarded a helicopter.

I'm not predicting that fate for either Supervisor Throne-Holst or Wilkinson. There are no impeachment provisions in either East Hampton or Southampton Town codes. There is no impeachment in town law.

And despite Gloria Prager's efforts, there is no recall in town law—no way to remove a Town Supervisor. An East Hampton town official said that supervisors are removed or rewarded in one way: via the ballot box. However, if a town official is convicted of a

Saving a Historic Lighthouse

By T.J. Clemente

According to Judge Henry Hedges, the 19th century expert on East End history (since his life basically spanned that century), "The Light House on Cedar Island was unknown until about 1838." Others claim it was originally built in 1839 and then altered in 1868, some 30 years later, to look like it does today. When the lighthouse was built, it was situated on a small island, which the hurricane of 1938 turned into a point by hurling sand between the island and the end of the mainland.

The large stone lighthouse was not built like the usual tall, cone-shaped varieties such as the Montauk and Fire Island lighthouses. Instead it was built with strong local stone, showing off the wealth the whaling trade was bringing to the former Indian village of Sag Harbor.

During the early to mid 1800s, due to the red-hot whaling trade, Sag Harbor was one of the world's leading ports. Many a whaling captain and crew member saluted as they either came home or embarked upon long whaling excursions, some taking as long as three years. But one day, whale oil, once so rare, was not needed for lamps. Kerosene was being distilled from crude oil for the first time up in New Haven around 1868.

The lighthouse was deactivated in 1934, at the height of the Great Depression. At that time the

The building in question, at Cedar Island

Coast Guard installed a green light on a steel tower that I have watched blink every six seconds as I sail home from Sunset Beach on Shelter Island, after watching the sunset. Often the dark outline of the lighthouse at Cedar Point looks like a silhouette of a ghost, its giant windows closed up with cinder-block like bricks—a far cry from the mammoth granite squares used to build it. The point is, many sailors on their way from East Hampton's Three Mile Harbor must negotiate the tricky current, narrowness and lack of cooperative wind when sailing through what is now NOT Cedar Island, but Cedar Point.)

Six years ago, efforts began to restore the lighthouse. Unfortunately, it was not followed through. But once again, efforts are being made to put forth bids to restore this remnant of the glorious past of Sag Harbor, to use an Indian phrase, "back into high feather." Jeld-Wen, a West Coast business that makes grants in the form of donating replica windows and doors to restore lighthouses of their choosing each year has put Cedar Island Lighthouse among their 12 finalists in its Reliable Lighthouse Initiative.

The lighthouse is owned by the Suffolk County Department of Parks and Recreation, and needs foundation work.

However it is still sound, as anyone who sails near it can tell you. Actually, it looks like it may be around well into the future, 500 years from now, with those thick granite blocks making what seems to be a 40-foot fortress box. The structure calls to mind an annex of those old armories of yesteryear.

The problem facing a major rehabilitation project is finding the point person who is willing and able to start the momentum to lead the fundraising. Years back it was Paul Simon who organized that huge concert with James Taylor to save the Montauk Lighthouse when it was in need of big bucks and new love. Today it stands tall, existing in museum quality (which is what it is, in fact, a museum). During the season many visitors pay an entry fee to walk up its steps to look out over the Atlantic Ocean, as did the custodians over the years when they had to light the "whale" oil and later kerosene, and eventually flick the light switch.

The Long Island chapter of the U.S. Lighthouse Society estimates the cost to be at least $20,000 to restore the light at Cedar Point Lighthouse. However, Sag Harbor, once a blue collar factory town making torpedoes, watches, and before that processing whale products, has now claimed its place as a historic town, with more pristine 19th century museum-quality homes than any other Hamlet in the country. However with Cedar Point in East Hampton, the present mood on spending for restoration projects manifested itself in the last local election (check out winning candidates views on historic houses) so efforts will definitely have to be private.

I know of one lighthouse that actually is a high-end restaurant and sleeps guests at a very high rate, but as of now no one is quite floating that idea—especially with all the campers sleeping in tents in nearby Cedar Point Camp site. Something should be done, but today money is scarce with high unemployment, and people are hard pressed to spend or budget money on heritage projects (except for windmills). However you can make a contribution by contacting the Long Island chapter of the U.S. Lighthouse Society through their website www.lighthouse-society.org.

felony under New York State law, he will be removed from office by State authorities. No one has committed a felony—not even Bill McGintee, much as some had hoped. But if you do unpopular things too often, watch out.

When asked for his reaction to this story, Supervisor Wilkinson sent me this response, "It is surprising, after winning by some 67% of the vote, that people are upset when you do what you said you were going to do."

I believe what old GWU Political Science Professor Purcell use to say: "Do what's right if you care, do what's politically right if you want to get re-elected."

Then he added "The secret is to do what's right the politically right way."

in its entirety, the annex building of Thayer's Hardware, (since rebuilt) filled with garden furniture. It also blew out windows.

In Bobby Van's at lunchtime the next day, someone who knew me said it seemed that twister was after me, both at home and at work. There seems to have been some truth to that.

This time, however, it seemed after my son, David. He called me from his house in Springs just as we were getting on a bus to New York City. We were at the Omni in Southampton. It was raining cats and dogs. The wind was howling. He was howling.

"You want me to come home? You want me to come home?"

"No, no, everything's alright here," he said. "It's just the whole rest of the village that's gone."

So we got outta Dodge.

For the rest of the week, in 100 degree heat and vegetation-wilting humidity, there were frequent reports, both in the city and the Hamptons, of huge patches of enormous black storms passing through the otherwise blue sky. They were sometimes accompanied by torrential rains or brisk winds, and though there were repeated tornado warnings from the government, there were no further tornados and finally the danger passed.

Check out the tornado damage video in Dan's Daily, at danshamptons.com, shot by David Rattiner.

Clothesline Art Sale

The year 1946 marked the first Cannes Film Festival in France and the introduction of the bikini in California. Not to be outdone, that same year The Guild Hall in East Hampton premiered its annual clothesline art sale.

This Saturday, July 31, Guild Hall will continue this tradition for the 64th time, featuring hundreds of artists each exhibiting several original oil, acrylic and watercolor paintings as well as prints, collages, photography, and small sculptures.

Apropos of the name, much of the artwork is strung on clotheslines, while other works rest against fences. In 1948, one of the latter was the victim of actor Buddy Eppson's dog, which relieved himself on a painting. Eppson bought the piece. Cliff Robertson and Dina Merrill were seen walking off with their purchases during the 1970s. In 1966, the event included an auction in the theater. The co-chairs that year got donated works from Fairfield Porter and Willem de Kooning, among other artists.

The goal of the show hasn't changed much. For decades, it has been an opportunity for emerging as well as critically acclaimed artists to show and sell their work. Each year, 500-800 pieces are sold, as established and first-time collectors comb the galleries in search of masterpieces.

Up to 1,000 art lovers have attended this show in the past to purchase fine art at affordable prices—many works are priced at only $50, and nothing is higher than $2,000. Admission to the show is free.

In addition to supporting artists by exposing their work to an enthusiastic audience, The Clothesline Art Sale also supports Guild Hall: all proceeds are split 50/50 between the artist and the organization.

—Susan Galardi

Artists interested in participating should call 631-324-0806 for registration information. Delivery of artwork is Thursday, July 29 and Friday, July 30.

Helping Kids

Mark Crandall of Hoops 4 Hope

By Allyson Zacharoff

There are so many types of people in the world, and sometimes it can be easy to focus on differences rather than similarities. One thing that all cultures seem to agree on is that the laughter of a child is a precious commodity. With this thought in mind, two exciting benefits this coming week will be raising money for some worthy children's charities.

On Saturday, August 7 is a fundraiser for Hoops 4 Hope, an organization that helps children in Africa who are particularly at risk of being involved in a variety of serious life issues (including drugs, HIV/AIDS and poverty) learn life skills through basketball programs. Hoops organizes tournaments and clinics, then weaves in important lessons that will help the children better face the world and succeed in it.

The group has so far touched over 10,000 young lives, working with children in Zimbabwe and South Africa. The individuals in this organization stand as examples of how important it is to care for the youth not only in our own country, but across the globe.

The Hoops 4 Hope event includes light refreshments, cocktails, and entertainment from 6 to 9 p.m.; live and silent auctions. Beginning slightly earlier there will also be a VIP EA Sports NBA Elite 11 Reception, from 5 to 7 p.m.

To purchase tickets to the Hoops 4 Hope event, on August 7 at 6 p.m. in Sagaponack, visit hoops4hope2010.eventbrite.com or contact moblair@28@gmail.com.

Another upcoming event for the sake of children is the fourth annual BG Open, scheduled for Thursday afternoon, August 5. It was established in honor of Beverly Goldstein, a retired elementary school teacher and tennis player who succumbed to a brain tumor in 2007. Her sister, Roz Goldstein, and her two friends, Rosa Evangelista and Mindy Schneider, began the annual event in 2008.

The focus of the afternoon will be on tennis, one of Goldstein's passions. The afternoon begins at 3:30 with warm-ups, then proceeds to a round robin. Players of all levels are invited to join in the tennis play. A cocktail reception will follow from 5:30 -7:30 p.m. Tickets: $150 for both parts of the event, or $50 for just the cocktails.

This year the event will benefit Dancing Dreams, a Long Island-based charity that helps physically and medically challenged girls on Long Island and around New York City become ballerinas. Through the program, these 3 to 17 year olds get the chance to dance and feel like

Polo: Exhilaration at 35 mph

Photos by Kathleen DeMontcy

Rob Payne of Alegria Team at Bridgehampton Polo

By Susan Saiter
Polo matches draw people who revel in the razzle dazzle of the scene, who love to strut their designer stuff while sipping a potent drink and tapping e-mail addresses into their Blackberrys. "What? Really? There's a polo match going on out there? Oh hey, cool...horses...riders...a little white ball. Yea-a-a, so where did you say the party tonight is?"

You'll find that scene under the VIP tent at Bridgehampton Polo. But polo has a whole other group of followers, too—the kind whose Ray Bans are actually facing the field, people who might be vicariously galloping along with the players, whalloping that dented little ball past the thundering hooves of four opponents heading toward them in a fury of hooves and mallets, who savor the thrill of scoring a goal as much as scoring a date.

The fans who like to do their partying after the match are largely what you'll find at the Southampton Polo Club, located on Millstone Road. One of those fans is Charles Ferri, formerly working in the investment world, and who this spring began sponsoring a team that plays many of its games at the Southampton Polo Club.

Last Saturday, he talked with a reporter and fans braving the 90 degree heat with no umbrellas, no awnings and definitely no big rollicking tent as he watched his new team, Star Vodka, play. "At the other field, there's all that glitz and glamour; they've totally Hamptoned it up. What I like about this is that it's pure polo." (Unfortunately, Star lost to the Kings, a top-rated team. But they are even for the season).

Ferri hadn't always had a lot of time for polo. He'd been too busy working in the world of finance at Bernstein Investment Management and later at Deutsch Bank. But the appeal wore off. "My biggest fear was that I'd find myself waking up in the morning and thinking, 'Hey, you have all the money in the world, but you don't have a life.'"

For a while, he owned the Star Room, a popular Hamptons night spot. Three years ago, he closed it and looked for a new venture. Making vodka seemed like the right challenge.

"I did research, testing. Guys laughed at me when I said I wanted to come out with a new American vodka. I was told to go to Russia, Poland, Sweden, a place where a little guy can stand up against the giant vodka brands."

The next step was getting the right kind of image for his "boutique" vodka, and last Memorial Day, he met a young woman at a party who knew how. It was Yvonne Morabito, a polo player. By summer, he found himself sponsoring a polo team.

American polo teams are semi-pro, but they generally have one or more professional players, like Star Vodka's Mauricio Devrient and Matias Majul, mixed in with non-pros like Morabito and Steven Sands.

Argentine Devrient is a five-goaler. (For perspective, anything above four is pretty amazing.) At one point in his career, he was a six

Who's Here

By David Lion Rattiner

LL Cool J. I mean...should I continue writing? He's a musician, a body builder, an actor, an author and a businessman. Raised by his grandparents in Queens, he rose from that kid who everybody knew was great at music to the guy that everybody bought music from.

LL Cool J is hard to miss. Physically, his biceps and abs have earned news stories in international publications. He keeps himself in excellent shape, and it's not all genetic—he works feverishly on his physique just as he does on his music, and that work ethic has made it impossible for him not to succeed, and not to be noticed.

Named James Todd Smith at birth, LL Cool J's blue blood Long Island, currently living between Manhasset and Los Angeles, where he stars in the hit television show "N.C.I.S.," which has been renewed for a third season. LL Cool J stands for "Ladies Love Cool James," and judging by the reaction of some female colleagues when I said I'd be interviewing him, the name is appropriate.

While very much a Long Island boy, LL doesn't get out to the East End frequently, even though he is the talk of the Hamptons after word began spreading that he would be honored and in attendance at Red, a benefit for the American Red Cross in Sagaponack. "Every time I've been in the Hamptons I had a great time. It's a very relaxing place for me," he said. "I love sharing time at people's houses with friends. I have had some great times with Russell Simmons at his place."

LL Cool J, Musician, Actor

What is striking about LL Cool J in conversation is his humility. The MO for celebrities these days seems to be the louder and weirder you are, the more success you get. But with LL Cool J, you sense a clear thinker who is thoughtful about what he says. He doesn't play a character with his celebrity, he simply is who he is—which is a guy who worked very hard to get to where he is. You also get the impression that he is grateful for his success, while at the same time, he's casual about the hard work that was behind it. It's reasonable to say that this can be attributed to his grandmother who raised him and made sure that he kept a good head on his shoulders. LL Cool J was a church-going boy in Queens who performed in the choir, a Boy Scout, and newspaper delivery boy—all while working on his dream of becoming a recognized musician.

Like his music, his voice and personality are filled with passion and heart that communicate the kind of person he is. For example, his reasoning for getting involved with the American Red Cross stirred up an immediate emotional response in his voice, "You know, I've been very fortunate to have a lot of success in my life, and when the American Red Cross approached me and asked if I would be willing to get involved out in the Hamptons, I was honored that they thought of me. It's so important that you give back, and when you look at what's going on in Haiti and places around the world that need help, it's really a great feeling to be able to do something about it. I really admire the work that they do at the American Red Cross, I really do."

And success is certainly something that he has had. His first CD, Radio, sold 1.5 million copies, and his second, Bigger and Deffer, sold 2.3 million copies in its release. From there, he just got bigger, putting out a new album every couple of years that would capture large audiences. In between, he performed the songs on stage and aggressively promoted his music.

Having conquered the music world through his talent, hard work and charming persona, LL Cool J was able to segue, quite naturally, into acting. This is rare for musicians—there are many famous singers who have had that desire but the public simply wouldn't accept it. LL Cool J is not in that boat. People just seem to like him.

On screen he had roles in major films such as Any Given Sunday with Al Pacino—a cult film among high school football players looking to get pumped up for their next game. He has also been cast in a wide array of roles and, as far as I can tell, has never once played the role of a rapper in film or on television. In fact, it's been quite the opposite. His role in the movie Deep Blue Sea was as a chef; in S.W.A.T. he was a badass cop. He's even appeared on "Sesame Street."

Currently he plays the role of an ex-navy seal in the CBS hit television show "NCIS: Los Angeles," which has earned him a lot of praise from critics. He's very into the show. "These NCIS guys in the real world are just incredible people. It's a world that I'm happy to portray on television."

LL Cool J keeps going, promoting a wildly successful book about fitness, LL Cool J's Platinum Workout, that gives secrets to gaining muscle and getting into shape. "Over the years I've learned a lot about fitness and staying healthy. A lot of people were asking me how I keep so healthy so I figured I'd explain it," he said, and then, of course, he wrote a book about it.

Stolichnaya Vodka donated by Monsieur Henri of New York. And all adult entries will receive a small 200 ml bottle of Alize, a combination of cognac and exotic passion fruit juices, also donated by Kobrand. Representatives from the United States and the Portuguese government will be on hand during the day and everybody coming to the event, which cost $2 adult and $1 child is entitled to a free tour of the Lighthouse. Some of those helping out in this event include Eric Cohen, the President of Flying Point Software, who will be working with the Grumman volunteers to determine the winners. Also Uihlein Boat Rentals, who will have a speedboat offshore to assist the Coast Guard in retrieving the entries. Also, down on the rocks at the base of the cliff, a group of surfers provided by Main Street Surf Shop in Wainscott, Long Island. Pre-launch training advice is being offered by the Pro-Body Exercise Studios in Bridgehampton and Southampton. And of course, the Montauk Historical Society, which is making this all possible, will be our hosts. There will be a big cash bar party at Kahuna after the Dan's Papers Flight to Portugal. See you at the Lighthouse!

(ten is the highest, and they are scarce). You don't keep your number, you have to keep earning it.

"The difference between a six and a ten is very small," Devrient said. "It takes three things to be good. Eighty-five percent of it is the horse. Then, the people you play with and against. Finally, there is [how often you] play."

Devrient has played, in fact, with Prince Charles of England three times, and has received awards from Queen Elizabeth herself. How good is the prince? According to Devrient, "In the old days he was a really good player. He still has a very good sense of the game."

Devrient is one of the few pros who also teaches, anything from coaching star polo players to showing raw beginners how to hold a mallet and the reins at the same time and not fall off the horse. In winter, he plays in Florida and in Argentina.

Both Devrient and Ferri hope that they are part of a trend. "Polo teams need sponsors," Ferri said. "I like to think I'm doing a good thing." Devrient said, "It really helps a team to have a sponsor. In fact, we pros are hoping polo will get into the range of other big sports." He said that polo teams are getting more air time on television and the Internet, and that over the past 25 years, he has seen a big hike in the sport's fans and sponsors.

"Polo is quite addictive," Devrient said, adding that it's challenging and fun because it combines riding with a whole set of other skills. "At 35 miles per hour, it is the most exhilarating thing ever."

day, it became clear that something had to be done. There should be a traffic circle, lights, traffic cops. I was so perturbed that I assigned my crack reporter T.J. Clemente to do a story about it. But there was no story because there was only one simple answer. People in Sag Harbor like the intersection the way it is.

Living in a small town, you learn things. You learn not to make rude hand gestures to inferior drivers on the road until you know each and every car driven by your co-workers, friends, and teachers and parents at your child's school. Just try it, and you'll find yourself pulling into the parking lot right next to the new office manager at whom, just moments earlier, you flashed the finger.

Being an editor of a community paper, you learn to never be rude to anyone on the phone, even if you are being given a long-winded self-serving pitch on Monday morning when you have 30 articles in front of you and politely say, "This isn't a good time, we're on deadline." Just try blowing someone off, and you're sure to be introduced to that person at a party at CMEE as the mother of the birthday boy.

So I've reverted to grinning like an idiot and waving excitedly to drivers who cut me off to make a left hand turn, pass me on a double line highway after tailgating me for miles, or pretend not to see me while pulling into a parking spot where I clearly had dibs. If it's someone I know, they'll think my cheery response means that I have forgiven the transgression. If it's a stranger, he'll wake up from tormented sleep, wondering, "Who WAS that I screwed on the road today? My wife's tennis partner? My son's teacher? My boss in the Hamptons for the weekend?"

"It's weird living in a small town," said an acquaintance of mine who moved out here from the city and works in real estate. "You can't screw anybody!"

And you can't cut people off at the intersection in the northern end of the Village. In Sag Harbor, you are accountable. While yielding, stopping and going are determined in theory on established rules of the road in most places, in this spot, where almost a dozen lanes in every direction converge with about a half dozen pedestrian walkways, drivers are governed by one set of rules: The Honor System. It's simply a question of whose turn it is—fairly.

Sitting at that intersection, waiting, wondering who has the right of way, you have to interact on a personal level with other drivers. Etiquette and communication come into play. Eye contact is necessary. Intentions are made clear by the subtleties of human interaction: a nod that means, "go ahead, I'll go next;" a gentle, sideways wave, like patting a baby's behind, that says, "move along quickly and I'll follow." Those should be followed by responses that indicate you're aware of and grateful for the offer—a thumbs up, quick wave, peace sign, smile, gestured tip of the hat.

This is the way it is meant to go at that intersection, as well as the two others—the southern end of town where Main meets Madison, and the spot at Jermain and Madison.

On the southern end, people leaving town on Main have the right of way. For some reason, they have to leave this lovely village so better to let them go before they change their minds and beg off a social engagement elsewhere. People coming INTO town on Main have a stop sign so they can remember they are now entering into a very personal little village where they'll be held accountable for their actions. People coming in from Madison can proceed into town without a stop sign. If they're coming in that way, they're probably old timers or locals who know the backroads and understand the intimacies of Sag Harbor.

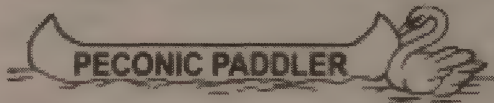

Finally, there's that odd spot where Jermain meets Madison. If you're doing the Jermain cut through from 114 to Main Street, you are only required to stop once at Madison. (It works the same way in either direction.) You have the right of way to turn on to the rest of Jermain, even though it's a left hand turn. It's still Jermain, after all. You may continue on your path. The town puts up a temporary speed "hump" (not quite a bump) on Jermain in the summer so people have a chance to slow down and remember these niceties. But some people traveling on Madison don't realize that the Jermain people making a left have the right of way. Please take note.

In all of these three spots, it's not just about roads randomly coming together, it's about lives intersecting. Vague traffic patterns provide the opportunity for specific human interaction—a wave, a nod and always, eye contact.

Drivers who don't look you in the eye aren't to be trusted. They're shifty. You just don't know what they might do next. They don't want to be accountable, they just want to be first. It's probably best to just let that ilk go. And, moments later, when you pull up right next to them in a parking spot on Main Street, or see them at the counter at Conca D'Oro, getting coffee at Java Nation, or ordering ice cream with their kids at Big Olaf, you can explain Sag Harbor's Honor System. And you can remind them that, in a small town, you can't screw people. You have to be able to look them in the eye.

Deep Hollow Ranch on the Block

By David Lion Rattiner

"The Oldest Cattle Ranch in America" is up for sale in Montauk, the latest of many substantial local businesses in that hamlet to be put on the block for millions of dollars. In June, The Montauket, known as a local bar for its incredible view and its rough neck vibe, includes a 4-bedroom home, 15-room hotel, and 2 cottages, went on the market for $17.5 million.

Deep Hollow Ranch, owned by the Leaver family for as long as anyone can remember, is another beautiful spot. Atlantic Beach Realty in Montauk has the listing on their website and is describing the property as "Historically known as the Oldest Cattle Ranch in the Country, this extraordinary property is being offered for sale. Included is the 17+ acre ranch and an exquisite new ranch house located on a separate 2 acre parcel that features 4 bedrooms, 3.5 baths, 2 fireplaces and all the charm and authenticity of the Old West. Also included is an additional buildable lot. The barns have been restored and updated and offer all that is needed for a successful horse operation. This property is a dream come true for the person or family that wishes to live on an historic property and enjoy a lifestyle that few people get to experience."

Deep Hollow Ranch could be attractive to a private buyer who would like to ride around on his own cattle ranch in Montauk. Some are hoping, though, that the horse-riding tours and ranch will continue on, should a new owner be found. One fan of the horse tours said, "It would be hard to digest to not be able to go horseback riding through Deep Hollow Ranch. That has been something that my kids and I have been doing for years."

Deep Hollow Ranch was also the location of the live Paul Simon and Billy Joel concerts that used to take place in Montauk.

The listing price is being furnished only upon request, however, curbed.com, a real estate gossip website, claims that they have run "experiments" on the listing. Curbed is estimating that the property is for sale at around $13 million.

These crown jewel properties in Montauk are riding on a real estate wave of large transactions that began with the sale of the Warhol Estate in 2006 to the current CEO of J. Crew, Millard S. Drexler, for a record price of $27 million. During that time Gosman's Dock went up for sale at $55 million but never sold, and the Montauk Yacht Club was bought by Andrew Farkas in 2007 for $34 million. The Wavestone Group then transformed the Shepard's Neck Inn into Sole East for $11 million in 2007.

More recently, The Crow's Nest changed hands in Montauk when Sean MacPherson bought it this year for $4.2 million. And the East Deck Motel, located on Ditch Plains Beach and famous for being featured in Playboy Magazine, is up for sale for $20 million.

We'll get you there.

Real Estate Rants and Rumblings

Doing the Numbers for 2nd Quarter

By T.J. Clemente

The second quarter 2010 (Q2) figures on East End real estate are in. Judi Desiderio the founder and CEO of Town & Country Real Estate said in her Q2 report that her firm "monitors 11 specific Hampton markets — each very different. We are pleased to report that in all 11 Hampton markets, the number of home sales and total home sales volume saw increases—significant ones at that."

Karli Kittine, Senior Manager, Public Relations, at Corcoran concurred in Corcoran's Q2 Report: "After a challenging 2009, the Hamptons has experienced a 134% increase in sales volume in 2010, as compared to the first half of last year. Increased activity in the high-end market has also driven average and median home prices up 10% and 34% respectively. We witnessed a 104% increase in sales volume in the luxury market (the top 10% of all residential sales). However, sales volume dipped slightly in the second quarter following a significant gain in the first quarter of 2010."

So let's look at the numbers, keeping in mind that the two firms use different dates to close the quarters and thus the figures are not the same. For consistency I'll use T&C numbers to compare Q2, 2010 to the same period in 2009.

In greater Sag Harbor (not the Village) sales were up from 10 in 2009 to 25. That's 150% increase in closings but the median home price in that area fell 19.98% from 2009's $874,000 to $700,000 in 2010. A bright spot was the doubling of homes sold in the $2M-$3.48M category.

In Sag Harbor Village the news was all good, with the median price of homes sold in Q2, 2010 up 140% from 2009. The median price jumped from $605,000 2009 to $1,041,250 this year.

In the Southampton area (not Southampton Village) 2Q sales were up big—141%—with 41 2010 sales versus 17 last year. However the median price did go down but only by 2.16% ($905,000 from $925,000). In Southampton Village the increase in sales was a respectable 46.67% increase going (15 in '09 up to 22 this year). The bright spot in the Village was the 13% jump in median price, from $1,880,000 to $2,125,000.

In Westhampton region (Hampton Bays, Westhampton Beach, Quogue and Quogue), it was back to triple digit increases with 95 closings in 2Q up from 46 last year. However in this region the median home price fell almost 10%, from $730,000 to $658,500.

In Bridgehampton, Water Mill and Sagaponack the situation fluctuated with a triple digit increase of 147% rise in Q2 sales from 17 in '09 to 42 in 2010. But the drop of $1.6 million plus in the median home price was attention getting—from almost $4 million last year to $2.3 million this year.

East Hampton Area including Wainscott, showed Q2 sales up 154% ($650K to $810K) and the median price up 24.62%. In East Hampton Village things were a bit different with only one more home sold this year compared to last (8 versus 7). The median price in the EH Village dipped 16.17% from $2.4 million in '09 to $2.012 million in 2010.

The Amagansett story was mixed, with sales up 113% but median price down 19.52% (from $2,062,000 to $1,660,000 in Q2 2010). Montauk had a similar story. Sales were up 171% versus 2009 (from 7 homes to 19) but the median price fell 21.32% (to $747,500 from $950,000).

The combined North Fork numbers came in with less sales activity but still with a 35.59% increase in 2Q sales—80 in 2010 versus 59 in 2009. The median price ticked up 3.02%, from $398,000 to $410,000.

Desiderio concluded her report with this: "Looking at all hampton markets combined, we see exactly what occurred in the 2nd quarter of 2010. The number of home sales more than doubled along with the total home sales volume, yet the median home sales price remained stable (-2.63%) and within each of the 6 price categories monitored by Town & Country, there were increases of as much as 150%."

Good News on Health Care for East End

By Kim Palmer

There have been two new additions to health and emergency care in Suffolk County: the expansion and renovation of The Jenny and John Paulson Emergency Department at Southampton Hospital and the opening of a Children's Hospital and Pediatric Emergency Department at Stony Brook University Medical Center.

On June 30, Stony Brook University Medical Center inaugurated the Stony Brook Long Island Children's Hospital, the exclusive children's hospital east of the Nassau/Queens border. The $80 million cost for the facility will be fully funded through grants and gifts.

The hospital is currently located within Stony Brook University Hospital, but plans are in development for it to become a free-standing structure. SBUH currently has 100 pediatric beds (12 in the Pediatric Intensive Care Unit and 10 in an inpatient Psychiatry Unit). With the recent addition of 40 pediatric faculty members, there are now over 100 full-time pediatric providers in 30 different specialties, as well as over 200 voluntary faculty members. With more than 7,000 children admitted each year, and primary services provided to over 50,000 children in 2009, SBUH has truly been a blessing to the community and its future. In addition to the existing services and expansion, a Neonatal Intensive Care Unit will be constructed next year and will be the most advanced in New York State. Current services include: the Regional Perinatal Center, the National Pediatric Multiple Sclerosis Center, the Pediatric HIV and Aids Center and the Cody Center for Autism and Development Disabilities.

Stony Brook boasts an array of highlights—it is the only Suffolk County hospital to provide kidney transplants for children, one of the 115 nationally accredited Cystic Fibrosis Centers, and home to a new Blood and Bone Marrow Stem-Cell Transplant program.

Southampton Hospital, an affiliate of Stony Brook University Medical Center, recently opened a newly renovated and expanded emergency room. The hospital contains the only emergency care center on the South Fork, treating more than 25,000 people annually, especially in the summer.

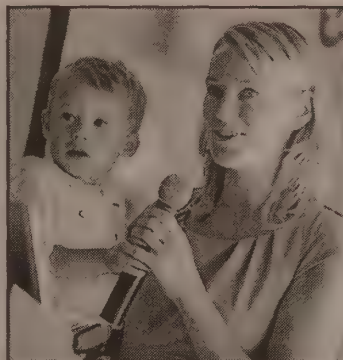

The recently finished facility, enabled by a $5 million dollar gift from John Paulson, includes several additions: centralized trauma nurses' station and triage area and a "fast track" area for less acute illnesses/injuries and a bereavement room. Expanded areas include two trauma rooms, an isolation room, two patient treatment rooms and seven cubicles, and four separate exam rooms (for orthopedic, gynecology and ophthalmology patients).

The new entrance, sporting a new cutting-edge "EMERGENCY" sign, now includes separate weather-protected entrances for walk-in patients and ambulance arrivals, allowing for better traffic flow and enhanced security. The general waiting area can now accommodate 30-35 people and has a pay phone and drinking fountain.

The Southampton Hospital emergency department is a New York State-designated Stroke Center and a winner of the HealthGrades Patient Safety Award (2008, 2010).

As the population on the East End increases, not only in the summer but with year-round residents, a state-of-the-art medical services facility within reach, at a reasonable distance from home, is critical.

Although Southampton Hospital has been serving the community for decades, the improved emergency room will give its health care providers the opportunity to provide more focused, faster care to those in need, while also being able to accommodate more patients.

The launch of Stony Brook's Children's Hospital will give residents access to an indispensable amount of pediatric services and specialties close to home, saving parents with severely ill children the added stresses of traveling for treatment.

Music, Art, Literature at LongHouse

By Allyson Zacharoff

LongHouse Reserve in East Hampton—Jack Larsen's renowned 16-acre outdoor art garden—will host three unique events this Saturday, July 31, including the official release of the new book, Jack Lenor Larsen's LongHouse, by Molly Chappellet. Chappellet, a friend of Larsen's, captured the Reserve's beauty in 220 photographs over the past decade. She was able to choose from thousands of images to create a book that artistically honors both the natural and the man-made, in both the gardens at LongHouse and the art installations that have been there over the past 10 years. Chappellet will be at the Reserve for a book signing at 6 p.m.

The special edition, priced at $75, has a cover designed by Larsen himself, as well as pages of hand-dyed and hand-folded Japanese paper. This edition is currently available at LongHouse, with the trade edition available from Chronicle Books in the fall. Bruna Martin of LongHouse shared that it "is an amazing book," that the LongHouse community is very excited about.

Saturday will also mark the opening of a new exhibition. Ceramic works by Kenyan Magdalene Odundo will be on display until October. The opening will provide an early and personal viewing of her contemporary pieces. The exhibition preview begins at 5:30 p.m., when the gardens will also open.

Molly Chappellet's book, Odundo's ceramic work

Having lived or spent time in several African countries, as well as Europe and part of the United States, Odundo's work has earned her great recognition throughout her life, including a 2008 African Art Recognition Award, that she received from the Detroit Art Institute's Friends of African and African-American Art, as well as her appointment as an Officer of the British Empire for her service to the arts, also in 2008. Odundo lives in Scotland, where she teaches art classes.

The third of this Saturday's "three exciting events," as Martin described them, will be the second LongHouse concert this summer, produced in collaboration with the Music Festival of the Hamptons. This Serenade in the Wind concert will feature music by the Festival

String Trio, playing "String Trio in B Flat D 471" by Franz Schubert and "Serenade in D Major, op.8 for Violin, Viola and Violoncello" by Ludwig van Beethoven. This portion of the evening, scheduled to begin at 6 p.m., is dependent on weather.

Everyone, from the most devoted art aficionado to the lover of classical music is sure to enjoy the events this weekend at LongHouse, because as Martin said, there will be "a little bit of everything."

Tickets to the day's events are $20 for non-members, $10 for members. Visit longhouse.org or contact Joanne Sohn at 329-3568 for tickets.

other children their age. The organization asks for a voluntary contribution for the lessons, but never turns a budding dancer away due to her family's financial situation. The dancers are partnered with high school students throughout the program, culminating in a final recital.

The event organizers wanted to find a charity that would help children, since teaching young people was such a large part of Goldstein's life. "She never married, she never had kids, but she loved kids," Mindy Schneider said, "we just try to honor Beverly and her love for children."

Review: King of Madison Avenue

By T.J. Clemente

Alas, the sheer pleasure of being able to read a really compelling, interesting narrative isn't always the way it is. But in my reading of The King of Madison Avenue, David Ogilvy and the Making of Modern Advertising, by Kenneth Roman, I traveled back in time to an era long gone but to be forever remembered—the 1960s when so much changed so quickly.

As John F. Kennedy presided over the passing of “the torch from one generation to another,” a semi aristocratic Scottish man of vision was transforming how America sells, thinks, buys, drinks and lives with his creative messaged advertising ideas. This book is the story of both David Ogilvy, founder of the international advertising firm Ogilvy and Mather as well as the modern concept of billion-dollar multi-media “branding.” It is a concept that permeated all areas—from baby powder to celebrities to financial services to politicians. In fact, in the last presidential election Obama's campaign was about enhancing the “Obama brand.” If only David Ogilvy, who died in 1999, were alive to see it.

What a story this is. The young man who gets the Cs in prep school returns years later extremely successful to tell the lads that even C students can achieve great things. The Oxford dropout turned to selling stoves and learned the art of the sale, and the importance of understanding the thought process of the housewife—perhaps the ultimate consumer. It was Ogilvy who wrote the copy, “When a Rolls Royce is traveling 60 MPH the loudest noise you hear is the electric clock. We have our engineers working on that too.”

The wit, that line perhaps defines the sublime story of a man who went to “Fettes,” the same prep school that Ian Fleming's fictional secret agent 007 James Bond attended. In fact, the gothic main structure there at the school was perhaps the model for Harry Potter's Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry.

Kenneth Roman, a former Chairman and CEO of Ogilvy and Mather (which later became Ogilvy), writes with so much of an insider's point of view of the subject and the subject matter, that you learn as you read. Quite frankly I laughed out loud every couple of pages because David Ogilvy is outrageousness. But more important may be that, while reading this book, you receive an advertising 101 lesson on the genius of Ogilvy's vision on selling, because truth be known he wrote many sales manuals and business plans that are still in effect 70 years later. Ogilvy set the trends many of us take for granted. His style of dress is now reflected in just about every successful man.

This book will help you be more successful at whatever you do because of David Ogilvy's insights. But it's also a very good, easy, fast read that quite frankly you don't want to end. The journey to ultimate success has many ironic twists and turns and accidents. As you sit next to “David” via this book, you find yourself cheering, laughing and in awe. The book is about a winner and how he won. It is a definite read.

between the vineyards and local restaurants and homeowners. Residents say events at the dozens of vineyards are overcrowding the once quiet North Fork, and filling the once peaceful air with noise. While some restaurant owners are waging war with the wineries, saying they take away restaurant business by offering food and beer in addition to just wine.

Perhaps this folk festival will help ease tensions by getting a whole new genre of “Up Islanders” to fall in love with the North Fork.

Dan's 38th Annual Kite Fly Takes off Aug. 8

By David Lion
Rattiner

I'm sorry but there are few things cooler than the Dan's Papers Kite Fly. My Dad started it 38 years ago, and it is pure magic every year. Hundreds of people head down to the beach with their kids and kites to participate in the best Hamptons event of the summer.

Hundreds of kites fly up into the air, kids run around smiling and laughing while local performers make balloons and do stunts, all while a band plays light music in the background, usually by a barbershop quartet or other eclectic music that puts a good vibe through the entire beach.

This year the Dan's Papers 38th Annual Kite Fly will be held at Sagg Main Beach in Sagaponack on Sunday, August 8, with dozens of categories to win, including highest flying kite (which always draws controversy between grown men who are convinced their kite is the highest in the sky) to funniest kite, which in the past has had some pretty hilarious and controversial figures flying high into the sky.

This year, the Kite Fly raises awareness of the Bridgehampton Child Care and Recreation Center, which provides educational, healthy and fun things to do for local kids in Bridgehampton along with the Children's Museum for the East End in Bridgehampton.

This event has never been anything other than wonderful and fun. There is no way not to have fun while flying a kite on the beach, it is one of the true simple pleasures of life that goes largely unnoticed until you do it. Literally, every type of kite you can think of shows up at the event, with some of the kites being fantastic stunt models that swoop up and down the beach and round and round in circles. With the new sport of kite surfing becoming more and more popular, we are speculating that kite surfing athletes will be zooming up and down the beach at high speeds to the delight of all spectators.

There will be a variety of fun entertainers on the beach, including face painters and gymnastic performers, twirlers and clowns, who every year, year after year, work hard to keep everyone having a good time.

The staff of Dan's Papers will be there, handing out cold drinks for free, and of course, a select handful of judges will be walking up and down the beach giving out awards for the best prizes.

Being a kite flying judge is one of the most difficult jobs in the world, having to choose among the hundreds of wonderful and thoughtful kites that fly high in the sky. For some, there will be heartbreak, for others, there will be victory, but it will be all in the name of fun and charity.

There is no cost to go to the Kite Fly, it is a completely free event so there is absolutely

Givin' You the BUSINESS

By T.J. Clemente

The sweet corn on the East End is having a banner season. I'm a corn eater, and when I took my first bite of 2010 kernels, I knew this was a good year. On most of the county's back roads you eventually roll through cornfields. In early spring and summer the corn is barely visible and then all of a sudden the stalks are 5-7 feet tall. Suffolk County plants around 1,400 acres of corn and harvests about 1,300 acres of it—to the tune of about 152,000 bushels—for grain, and 2,500 tons for silage (animal feeds and biofuels). Interestingly, sales of corn that people actually eat brings in New York State farmers about $191 million; the silage brings in $262 million.

Corn for Fun and Profit

Although Suffolk County is the largest agricultural county in the state in terms of production, stats about farms across the U.S. from the 2007 federal farm census ranks New York at number 22 nationwide for producing corn for grain, and at number 3 for producing corn for silage.

New York State advises farmers and home growers to wait until frost danger has passed before planting corn. Depending on the year and the specific area, Cornell University notes that this occurs from April to July. Usually "corn harvesting season" in New York is from mid summer to late summer.

The Peconic Land Trust has many goals but John Halsey always talks about preserving farmland in the county as one of the most important, for many reasons. Checking on what is happening with farmland nation wide I went to the last federal Agricultural department official census, from 2007. It found that American agriculture landscape as of 2007 consisted of about 2.2 million farms (75,810 more farms than in 2002). But the total amount of acreage of the farms is about 922 million—that's a loss of over 6 million acres since 2002. The number of farms in Suffolk County, according to the Agricultural statistics, is 585. Farmland in Suffolk county totaled 34,404 acres, with the average size of farm coming in at 59 acres. The U.S. government pays out a total of around $8 billion to subsidize farms, averaging $9,523 per farm. The average per farm production expenses nationwide is about $109,359.

John Halsey always tells me that living in Suffolk County is special because of the access of the local produce in all the small farm stands and town markets. He stressed the importance of "the integrity of the food supply," meaning knowing where the produce is coming from just safety reasons. He has made it his life's work to help promote produce like Suffolk County corn, but this year, quite frankly it promotes itself. Last years early summers rains affected the sweetness of the corn. If you have not sampled the crisp sweet corn yet, get to it. Cook it up over a fire still in the husk or in tin foil, steam it, boil it, bake, micro-wave it—just don't overcook it.

By the way, while we're doing the numbers, an ear of corn on the cob without butter has only 120 calories. That's equal to an English muffin. Have one for breakfast.

no reason not to go. Parking will not be a problem at the event either, but be aware that you need a sticker to park at the beach BEFORE 6 p.m., if you have a sticker, get there at 5:30 p.m. or earlier. After 6, cars without beach stickers may park without fear of being ticketed. No parking is allowed along Sagg Main Road by order of Sagaponack Village. The parking lot at Sagg Main Beach is vast and large and will provide adequate spots for you and your family, however, it is advised that you get there on time. The Dan's Papers 38th Annual Kite Fly runs from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. and at the end, an awards ceremony will take place for all of the winners, who will enjoy gift certificates from local Hamptons restaurants and other fantastic prizes. Of course, the best prize is the respect that is earned for having a top kite. Among some of the top prizes will be for the highest flying kite, longest tailed kite, most beautiful kite, most geometric kite, most exotic kite, most futuristic kite, most graceful kite, most natural kite, most newsworthy kite, oldest kite flyer, youngest kite flyer, scariest kite, tiniest kite, ugliest kite, best colored kite and more!

NaturesWay
 The GREENER Carpet CleanerSM
 Oxymagic Natures Way[®]
 Non-Toxic, Child and Pet Safe,
 30 to 60 Minute Average Dry Time

"Since 1998, Oxymagic has been at the leading edge of carpet cleaning technology. Today we service our customers in 25 states all over the United States. The Oxymagic system is non-toxic, safe for children, and safe for pets. It utilizes the power of oxygen to break down stains and restore your carpet to look like new. The oxygenated solution, that is called NaturesWay, crystallizes allergens, dust mites, mold spores and dirt so that it can be easily extracted from your carpet. It leaves no sticky residues behind, making sure carpets stay clean longer. Our machines have counter rotating soil brushes and a powerful suction system that reaches and extracts debris from deep down in your carpet, not just from the surface. The Oxymagic system avoids over wetting, so there is no shrinkage, no mildew problems and dries beautifully in about 30 minutes."

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

I diagnosed myself with Jeep envy last week.

I don't know what it is about a Jeep Wrangler, but it's awesome. The car gets terrible gas mileage, is extremely uncomfortable to drive, and has plastic doors that you zip on and off. But a Jeep has got to be the coolest thing in the world. It says, I'm laid back, but I'm also out for adventure.

There are a few Jeep Wranglers for sale around here lately, and I stood looking at one for sale that's red, really old and just $900. It looked like it ran, all I cared about was being able to use this car for six months and it would justify the cost of paying for it compared to the miles I'd put on my current car, a Pontiac Vibe, and the car payments on that.

I daydreamed about that Jeep. And then I actually had a dream about it that night. I was riding down a backroad in blue jeans and a t-shirt and cheap sunglasses and there was a guitar in the backseat. When I awoke, I realized that to this day, I still haven't learned how to play guitar.

I think everyone would think I was the man if I had a Jeep. The word Jeep is so cool. What does it mean? It's like "Ferrari," it just makes sense.

I took my sister Molly, currently a film student at SVA in New York City, to see Inception, which is all about having control over the dream state. I left the movie dazzled. The movie is amazing. It was the first time in nearly a decade where I left a theater completely impressed. Molly and I were jumping up and down, perhaps we are in a dream right now, maybe our lives are just a dream? We discussed philosophy for an hour as we did a few loser laps around downtown East Hampton.

When I went back to my house, the red Jeep popped back into my mind. I realized that in my dream world, I have a Jeep that I drive wearing blue jeans and toting a guitar. And then it hit me how all of us are really just trying to make our dream worlds our reality. Just go see the movie.

I have to end this column without addressing the controversy surrounding Montauk and the 7/11 that's going to open up there. If there is any place in the world where the residents get to live in a dream that is reality, it's Montauk. Having lived there for over a year, I felt guilty—like I was doing something that wasn't fair to everyone else. People who live in Montauk like to keep things the way they are, which I am also in favor of. However while living there, on a few occasions, I needed to buy something late at night. One time I needed Advil. Another time, writing late at night, I needed a break and wanted a cup of coffee. There was no place to get these things and it bothered me.

A 7/11 in Montauk would solve that problem. I don't see how it would interfere with small businesses out there, since everyone is closed during the late hours that the 7/11 is open. I can't imagine a coffee shop losing business to a 7/11 any more than it would to any other coffee shop. I also think that 7/11 execs are morons for opening a 24-hour business in Montauk. The poor soul working there in the middle of February will be so lonely, and the characters that he's going to deal with are a rare breed—winter residents in Montauk who need a bag of chips at 2 a.m. There's no trade parade in Montauk during the winter, so it will be interesting to see how a 7/11 does there. A part of me also feels deeply that a 7/11 is a local business, they're in most of the Hamptons, including Sag Harbor which is just as relentless as Montauk in terms of keeping big business out. I can't imagine Sag Harbor without a 7-11.

There was a time when Peter Ferraro, the man who is renting his Montauk building to 7/11, dreamed that one day a 7/11 in Montauk would show up, it's been public for years that he's been trying to make it happen. Now he seems to have gotten his dream. You can thank being able to make your dreams into reality for that.

Dueling Divas at Guild Hall this Weekend

By Susan Saiter

The last weekend in July is Diva delight weekend at Guild Hall, when smooth cabaret singer Karen Akers and Broadway star Christine Ebersole approach the one-woman show format from very different angles.

"Akers Sings Porter 'Anything Goes'" will begin the weekend on Friday, July 30. "The whole idea of the show was to give a party," Akers said in a recent interview. "To have a lot of fun."

Of course, the fun is the sophisticated kind—Porter was the king of suave. "My show has its thoughtful moments as well," Akers added. "Anyway, my head is full of Porter."

The show will kick off with "I'm Throwing a Ball Tonight." Akers plans to mix things up by offering some of Porter's less familiar tunes, like "Where Have You Been?" along with those that people don't always connect with the cosmopolitan songwriter, such as "Don't Fence Me In," and other songs audience members will sing in the parking lot, like "Let's Do It." Akers will also take on "It's Alright With Me," a song usually performed by men.

The chanteuse, who lived in Paris, will sing chansons about gay Paree, including "Allez-vous En," in French. There will be some audience members who could sing along en francais as well. "Hamptons audiences are very sophisticated," Akers said. "They've heard a lot, they're appreciative. They are New York par excellence, East Coast, intelligent, interested in many things."

Among her achievements, Akers has entertained Presidents George Bush (the first) and Ronald Reagan. "Peggy Lee had been scheduled but ended up having bypass heart surgery. They called me the day before. And, of course, the dress I wanted to wear was in another city! I found out that it was Frank Sinatra who had suggested to Nancy Reagan I fill in. Honestly, I had no idea he even knew who I was."

Having been compared to stars with such diverse styles as Barbra Streisand, Edith Piaf, and Marlene Dietrich, Akers said, "I can be very different. But it's still me. I'm the only instrument I've got." Except for, she added, her accompanists Don Rebic, on piano, and Dick Sarpola, on bass. Akers is a regular at the Algonquin, and will be have a six-week stint there beginning September 14.

The weekend goes from cool and dreamy to wow on Saturday, July 31, with "Christine Ebersole in Concert." Famous for her roles in Broadway plays and musicals as well as in movies and on television, Ebersole plans to treat the audience to tunes she sang at her winter stint at the Carlyle in New York, adding some from her Tony-award winning role in the musical Grey Gardens.

"That was my favorite role," she said last week in an interview. "I always loved the Kennedys, the allure, the magic, the whole Camelot thing."

The documentary portraying the Grey Gardens story is hardly a happy one. The musical, though, manages to be witty as well as insightful. It portrays some of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis' relatives, the Bouviers, as a family of the upper crust, an often clueless clan, living the good life on the East End, while two lost ladies languished away in a filthy, crumbling mansion overrun with cats. Ebersole played both Edith Bouvier Beale and "Little" Edie Beale, receiving rave reviews from top critics.

Few performers are as versatile as Ebersole, who speaks with the ever-so slightly lingering Midwestern accent of her hometown on the North Shore of Chicago. Among her varied roles, she's played the wisecracking sexpot in Dinner At Eight and ethereally alluring ghost in Blithe Spirit. She won her first Tony Award for her role in 42nd Street. At one point in her career, she played two totally different types at the same time—Ado Annie, the girl who "cain't say no" to the fellers in Oklahoma, and Lady Guinevere in Camelot.

"Playing opposite Richard Burton, no less, in Camelot!" she said. "I had three days to learn the Ado Annie part. I don't know how I did it. I never could do it now. But when you're young, you don't know what you're getting into."

Some Ebersole fans will remember her as the news co-anchor on "Saturday Night Live" back in 1981-82. And those hooked on the show "Royal Pains" will remember her as the woman who doesn't mind admitting she's had a little work done. In that episode, she gets a flat tire—no, not the kind you get fixed at the auto repair shop, but the kind that a doctor re-inflates for you. Her character, Ms. Newberg, was introduced this summer as the girlfriend of the main characters' n'er-do-well father, Eddie R. Lawson, played by Henry Winkler.

"I love doing the show," she said. "It's so well-written, the characters are very well-developed, and it's a great premise."

Ebersole said the producers have made her character a recurring role, so she'll appear in more episodes soon. One thing viewers have to look forward to is an episode in which she throws a "bark mitzvah" for her dog.

During the concert at Guild Hall, Ebersole's new album Christine Ebersole Sings Noel Coward will be on sale. And she expects to be back at the Carlyle this winter.

NEW YORK'S MOST CELEBRATED SYNAGOGUE

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

The Evolution of the Beach Basket

It takes years of experience to know what you really need at the beach. Remembering back to my youth without scaring myself to death or naming any names, I recall how my beach baskets changed with time.

1960s: Big towels, Sun-In hair bleach, baby oil for tanning, transistor radio tuned to 77WABC because the DJ, Cousin Brucie, would time your tan and say, "Okay, for you girls on the beach, it's been 15 minutes, time to turn over." We basted ourselves in baby oil and turned on an imaginary spit on our towels to achieve the perfect tan. Sunblock did not exist. If you burned, you slathered on Noxzema. Yoohoo in glass bottles with a bottle opener. Bologna sandwiches on Wonderbread. Bikinis were just beginning to appear, but only sluts wore them. Cool sunglasses and floppy hat with Peter Maxx design. I love the beach. I don't mind the sand sticking to the baby oil on my body.

1970s: Big towels, Sun-In hair bleach and Love's Baby Soft lotion instead of baby oil. Some expensive lotion from France arrived, called Ban de Soleil, and now there were vicious rumors circulating that we should not baste ourselves with oils, nor bask in the sun. Something about skin cancer. Everyone wore a two-piece, so now we had to tan our middles, skin cancer or not. Noxzema, Frescas with the pull tabs on top so you can make pull tab necklaces on the beach. Hostess cupcakes (two in a pack), Devil Dogs and Slim Jims. Cool sunglasses and brim hat with scarf. I love the beach. I never feel better than when I'm near the water.

1980s: Blanket from home that is on its last legs and beach towels that are brightly colored, but much thinner and with a shorter life than the beach towels of yesteryear. Suddenly there's a man in my life and somehow, once we got married, he lost all his skills at being an independent adult. Now I have to pack beer and salami and cheese sandwiches. Worse, children have shown up claiming that I'm their mother and they have the papers on me to prove it. My two-piece bikini has been retired and I'm back in a one piece Jansen with a formed cup bra. I have become my mother. I am dipping my small Celtic children in 50 protection sunblock because they will burn if they are exposed to fireworks. The beach is too much work. I can't track two kids there. I tried just grabbing any little kid that ran close to me, figuring someone would grab one of mine and we could switch in the parking lot, but everyone seems to want their own kids and no one wants extras. I had cool glasses until I sat on them. My hair is a sun blown wreck. The beach is no longer fun. It's where I get to do everything I have to do at home, but with sand.

1990s We are no longer going to the beach unless we can drive up in a Winnebago and have it catered. Nothing pleases my bratty monster children. I'm weighing the pros and cons of prison time against beating them into submission. Everyone has a cell phone on the beach, why? Aren't they here to get away from everything and everyone? I hate listening to all the one-sided conversations. At least with two people in the flesh you can hear the whole argument and take sides.

2000s: Back to the beach. The children grew into people with brains and are considerate of others. I have no idea how this happened. I now spread an old comforter down and sit in a folding chair. I have a book in my beach basket that I can read without interruption. I have some kind of guilt-free healthy drink and I am wearing sunblock, which sort of defeats the purpose of being in the sun. I'm just choosing to live with the contradiction. I'm in a one-piece bathing suit that looks drapery on the outside but has an inner lattice work of struts and straps that rival the Eiffel Tower for uplifting engineering. I still refuse to buy a cell phone. Unless I'm on the list to receive a donated organ, I'm not granting the world access to me at the beach. I have genuine imitation Chanel sunglasses because at dusk, when the sun is directly in a passerby's eyes, and if the passerby has had a few drinks, I might pass for Jackie O—from the sunglasses up.

Why did the Village Zoning Board deny the application of the East Hampton Library?

After more than 35 public hearings over a period of 7 years, last week the Village of East Hampton denied the application for a one-story (above ground) addition to be built with private donations at no taxpayer expense.

The denial has little to do with traffic on Main Street...

Two separate engineering firms hired by the Village say the addition will have negligible impact on Main Street traffic. New York State Department of Transportation says the same thing.

The denial has little to do with parking...

The Library has always said it will install whatever parking spaces the Village wants, and prefers using grass pavers to minimize the use of asphalt. When the Village engineer recommended 16 more spaces, the Library agreed to provide them.

The denial has little to do with preserving the corner green...

The land was donated to the Library in 1943 with no strings attached for the very purpose of allowing the Library's future expansion. After completion of the new wing, 84% of the existing open space you see around the Library would be preserved. In addition, the Library offered to convey to the village a free Conservation Easement. The Village rejected the offer.

The denial has little to do with costs...

The addition will be paid for with private donations. No taxpayer funds will be used for construction.

Public Referendum

Saturday, August 14, 2010

9AM - 3PM in the Library

All registered voters of the East Hampton, Springs and Wainscott School Districts can vote on the proposed project.

The denial has little to do with the size of the addition...

The original 10,300 square-foot addition was approved unanimously by the Village Design Review Board. A year later, the Library reduced the size by a third to 6,800 square feet as a compromise. Then, the Village proposed a historic house be moved to the center of the corner green and be used as the Children's Wing. The Library agreed. After the Library spent money on drawings and plans, the Village withdrew that offer. Recently, the Library offered to further reduce the size of the building. Again, the offer was rejected by the village.

The denial has little to do with the size of the lecture room...

The current lecture room is a cement block basement room that seats a maximum of 45 people in folding chairs. The proposal would have expanded and refinished the lecture room to seat a maximum of 60 people in folding chairs and add an elevator for handicap access and emergency exits to meet safety codes. The Library is proposing to add only 15 seats to its lecture hall and recently offered to reduce the proposal to 10 seats. Again, this was rejected by the Village.

The denial has little to do with variances...

Recent Village approvals of two church additions, a new museum, and Guild Hall's renovation required no parking variances. The Village did not require additional parking for any of these projects. All of these other institutions have much greater seating capacity than the Library and the Village decided that their large parking requirements could be handled with the available on-street parking spaces. The Library has been held to a blatantly inconsistent and unfair standard.

It's all about exclusion.

A few politically influential people in the village want the Library to serve only village residents. That's what they mean by village preservation. They believe the people from outside the village should be excluded from the Library. Yet for over 100 years, all residents of East Hampton, Northwest, Wainscott and Springs have used the East Hampton Library. These people say it is fine for residents of Northwest, Wainscott and Springs to come to the village for mail, church, and to spend money on shopping, restaurants, and entertainment but they should not come to the Village for free library services.

In recent years the Library Board has diversified its membership to include Board members from Northwest, Wainscott, Springs, Three Mile Harbor, and more second homeowners. That's when the trouble began. That's what this is all about.

Village politics . . . at its worst.

What You Can Do

The Library has scheduled a Public Referendum on Saturday August 14th from 9AM to 3PM at the library. All registered voters in Springs, Northwest, Three Mile Harbor, Wainscott and the Village are eligible to vote. The Library Board must decide if it will appeal the village denial. The Library will abide by the outcome of the Referendum.

Dance & Spin Your Way to Beautiful Curves

By Kim Palmer

From paddle boarding to TRX, new ways to work out, especially for women, are popping up all over the Hamptons. This August, the innovative, celebrity-praised S-Factor workout is coming to HGC Southampton Gym for two weekends.

S Factor is a pole dancing workout designed by actress, author, filmmaker and dancer Sheila Kelley, for women only. The workout combines ballet, yoga, Pilates and pole dancing, to "nurture a woman's natural S shape, promoting health, confidence and empowerment," and is encouraged for all ages, fitness levels and body types. Kelley described the movement as "if you took Tai Chi and made it feminine and sexual, and added a Latin flavor to it."

Kelley was a classically-trained dancer and soloist at the Westmoreland Ballet Company, and attended New York University's Tisch School of the Arts as a dance major. She created S Factor after preparing for her role as "Stormy," in Dancing at the Blue Iguana, when she had to learn to striptease and pole dance. She discovered a drastic change in her body from exotic dancing. "I was blown away. I saw these beautiful curves and long lean muscle," said Kelley.

Combined with her previous knowledge of ballet and exercise, she created a truly feminine, sensual workout, giving women confidence in their body and enhancing their sexuality. "The body is its own entity. The male and female body are as different as the male and female mind," Kelley said.

For many of us, pole dancing and striptease seems intimidating and embarrassing, but don't worry, you're not alone. Even Kelley felt this way when she first discovered exotic dance. "It takes a lot of bravery to walk into an S Factor class, but once you walk through that fear, it becomes a place of exploration and play. It's an undiscovered land for women."

Although pole dancing classes are showing up at gyms across Long Island and New York, S Factor was the first fitness workout created incorporating striptease, which has given the creators and instructors time to improve and master the concept, while focusing on feminine empowerment. The moves are meant to "move the body in a non-linear way with a woman's natural shape" said Kelley. "They strengthen the muscle while stretching it, with lots of oblique and ab movements."

A typical class involves six elements: wall, floor, chair, striptease, pole and dance routine. The background music plays to the elements, beginning with warm, soothing tunes, moving to slow alternative, to rock and roll and hip hop for the pole and dance routines.

S Factor studios, located in New York, Chicago,

Houston, and various California locations, boast a dimly-lit setting with soft red lighting and no mirrors, which Kelley describes as "warm, cozy and safe." In the Hamptons preview, the S Factor crew will be covering all of the mirrors and windows with fabric and setting up low red lights throughout to create the atmosphere.

S Factor will be at HGC Southampton Gym August 6-8 and 13-15. It is recommended that you register in advance. For a complete schedule and registration: 212-989-8030 or sfactor.com/ny (on events page). Cost: $50 (1-hour)/$65 (1.5-hour).

For more info on S Factor studio locations and classes, visit sfactor.com. The workout is also available at home. Kelley has three instructional DVDs available for purchase, as well as her book, The S Factor Book: Strip Workouts for Every Woman.

If you're more of the spinning enthusiast, celebrity trainer Rebecca Kordecki will be offering her KOR+ classes (previously Booty Slide®) at Flywheel Sport's Sag Harbor location and B East Fitness in Amagansett.

Another celebrity favorite, Kordecki's technique focuses on strengthening the core, lifting the butt and firming the body as a whole. Using specially designed movements and positions, the workout targets every muscle, in a 45-minute class. This is Kordecki's fifth season as a personal trainer and fitness company owner in the Hamptons.

For more information and complete schedule, visit flywheelsports.com, beastfitness.com or Rebeccakordecki.com. Kordecki is also available for private training (see website for details).

There you have it ladies; two great ways to embrace your femininity, break a sweat and tone that booty. So get out there and embrace those curves!

Remembering The Bridge

By Ryan Pilla

Yes, I'm going to revisit this issue, despite the fact that most avid race fans and racers may already know this sad tale. I feel it necessary to keep alive and honor our local history by informing those who may not already know that Bridgehampton was once home to one of the greatest road-racing courses in the country, called "The Bridge," at least according to movie star-turned-racer, Mr. Paul Newman, among many, many others.

Located just off Millstone Road in Bridgehampton is a 500+ acre parcel of land that was once home to an undulating field of dunes, decorated with winding asphalt strategically designed to capture the highs and lows of the area's elevation, which produced a fast, scary, extremely challenging track. As Mario Andretti put it, "It was dangerous, in a sense...it could scare the bejesus out of anybody." I personally set one of the fastest lap times ever in a supercharged BMW M3 on the last day the track was open. The Bridge also served as home base for my father's E-type Jaguar testing in the 1950s.

Having driven most of the major tracks worldwide, I can say that my affection for the course is not limited to its convenient location relative to my home and business. I can say, with years of racing experience, that the Bridge was truly a spectacularly laid out course. It was thrilling and technically challenging. This track will forever hold a special place in my heart for these and many other reasons.

Besides the inclines, drops and radical corners, this was a beautiful track with gorgeous 180 degree views of the North Fork, Shelter Island, Sag Harbor and the deep blue Peconic Bay.

The track was created back in the 1950s by a group who called themselves Bridgehampton Road Races Corporation. It was an answer to new regulations outlawing street racing, which had been prevalent on the public roads of Bridgehampton at the time. The group acquired the 550-acre plot overlooking Noyac Bay for a slim $55,000. The 2.86 mile track was complete by 1957 and became an instant attraction for all kinds of racers, including Richard Petty, A. J. Foyt, Al Unser, Stirling Moss, Paul Newman and Mario Andretti.

The next two decades were filled with fun, including all kinds of regional and national racing. As the Hamptons became more populous, the neighboring residents' complaints grew louder and more fierce. Tension over decibel levels grew and the crackdown began, leading eventually to very strict noise ordinances imposed by Southampton town in 1983. The writing was on the wall. There would be a fight to keep the beloved track in operation. Once the noise restrictions were in place, fewer and fewer races were held there and the reality set in that the heyday of The Bridge had past.

A racing enthusiast named Robert M. Rubin acquired the property in 1983 with supposed intentions to continue the track's operation and save it from development. After many years passed without much improvement in relations with the anti-racing segment of the community, and no budge in the town's noise restrictions, Rubin finally succumbed to what I can only imagine was the temptation of development and dollar signs in the late '90s. The town of Southampton granted Rubin permission to construct housing and a golf course on the premises.

Another golf course in the Hamptons? No offense to you golf fans out there, but adding one more golf course among the many already here and replacing a unique treasure such as the Bridge, was a knife in my heart. This ignited fury among local racers and race fans, including the Bridgehampton Racing Heritage Group, which lodged a campaign to stop the development and list the site as a national historic treasure.

Racers were not the only group in town against the golf course proposition. Environmentalists had their own beef regarding this development project. The Bridgehampton race track sits atop a large aquifer, which feeds the surrounding area its drinking water, so there was a fear that the bevy of chemicals that a golf course would utilize to maintain their green lawn could infiltrate that supply.

Despite those forces battling against the golf course development project, it did in fact succeed. Alas, my beloved Bridge is gone. Only ghostly remnants of the once great track still exist today. The main straight, the dangerously blind first turn, and the Chevron bridge over the track are still in place. These fixtures decorate the race-themed golf course now. This token tribute to a lost treasure is a sad reminder of what was lost. I think often of how much more fulfilled my inner racer would be if I could hop into my M3 race car and speed five minutes down the road from my repair shop to do some hot laps at this mighty track. Unfortunately, I must resort to a major road trip with car and trailer in tow to get my fix.

The memory of this great track and our racing heritage should remain part of local history. Bridgehampton Racing Heritage Group continues to do a good job of this by maintaining a great website in honor of the old track. Check out their site at bridgehamptonraceway.com where you can read all about the track and see some great photos from the track's heyday. A montage of vintage "Bridge" photos create a mural on the walls of my repair shop. It is a true pleasure to keep alive the significant racing history of the town I call home.

Facing It

All of us have thought about changing something they don't like about their face. There's a new technique that uses fat cells, and it offers a near permanent result that looks natural.

It's called Autologous Fat Transplantation (A.F.T.), and it's pioneered by Lewis M. Feder, M.D., a Diplomate American Board of Dermatology, a Fellow American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery in Manhattan.

Doctor Feder explains, "I have found other ways in which to make permanent structural changes in the body, particularly the face. This represents an exciting advance without scarring and without the use of invasive procedures, to achieve a more youthful and aesthetic appearance."

The key to A.F.T. is to regard fat cells as fragile and easily traumatized. Dr. Feder noticed that while doing liposuction procedures and re-injection into other areas, the fat was not handled well. It would degenerate undesirably, requiring the patient to come back in for more work. With a new technique, he found he could create permanent results with roughly 50 percent of the work that he did, preventing uneven results and giving the patient a long lasting look that requires fewer touchups.

Dr. Feder has refined a technique which, through the use of blunt instruments, permits gentle, atraumatic removal of controlled amounts of fatty tissue from chosen donor sites. The fat is taken from the patient's body and then purified and cleaned of all potentially nonviable substances, such as dead cells, oil and even anesthesia-fluid so that pure, healthy fat cells will be injected back into the patient after the extensive cleaning. Any excess fat is then saved and frozen for any future use with that patient.

The purified fat cells are then infiltrated into the tissues of the recipient site in such a fashion as to isolate the cells one from another, encouraging it to anchor to the pockets under the skin. He then molds those areas in a very gentle manner into place. Although this takes him a great deal of time and effort, it results in permanent change over time and is therefore worth the extra effort.

All of this is done by hand using the French syringe technique, which in Dr. Feder's opinion is far better than a suction machine as it is too traumatic to the tissue.

This whole procedure requires a great amount of technical skill but also a great amount of artistic skill and judgment, which countless patients have claimed that Dr. Feder is among the best in the business.

Dr. Feder's practice has pioneered A.F.T. techniques, but also provides liposculpture, scar revision, chemodermabrasion, sclerotherapy, chemical peelings and laser surgery. His office is located at 965 Fifth Avenue at 78th Street in Manhattan. His number is 212-535-8700.

Simple Art of Cooking Silvia Lehrer

"They're all sold out", said of friend of mine prior to the event. And indeed it was. Martha Stewart, the lifestyle connoisseur, was the honored guest at The James Beard Foundation's Chefs & Champagne annual gala held at Wolffer Estate Vineyards in Sagaponack on July 24.

Susan Ungaro, president of the James Beard Foundation, welcomed Martha to the podium to congratulate her for her contributions to the culinary arts. Martha graciously acknowledged everyone's warm welcome, and recalled working with Beard. "He was a man bigger than life with an unusual physiognomy and always leading the way in terms of food and wine in America." She acknowledged the importance of the Foundation's Christian Wolffer Culinary Scholarship. Each year the scholarships are awarded to talented young people who go on to the best culinary school in the United States.

Guests sipped champagne, Wolffer Estate wines, Belgian beers, soft drinks and thrilled at the delectable tastings offered from the more than 35 talented chefs under the great tent, many of whom are James Beard award winning chefs.

Spectacular tastings overflowed at every station such as Todd English's pastrami spiced kobe steak, lobster sauce and polenta fries, Pomme Café Brasserie's smoked salmon cheesecake with red onion crème fraîche, Michael Ginor's Hudson Valley Foie gras, duck prosciutto and peach chutney, Recette's peaches 'n cream', raspberry coulis, panna cotta and champagne gelatin, De Bragga's wet and dry aged wagyu beef and Robbin Haas' butter poached lobster. These were just a few of the outstanding treats. Local chefs, Jason Weiner of Almonds favored us with savory smoked bluefish and Michael Gerlach of Nick & Toni's cooled us with his refreshing lemon gelato with blackberry compote.

The VIP after party menu, catered by Citarella, wowed the participants with an extraordinary 5-course buffet. The sun had set, the moon was high in the pale blue sky and all was pleasant in the cool of the evening.

ALMOND'S HOUSE SMOKED BLUEFISH

Jason Wiener, executive chef and proprietor of Almond in Bridgehampton and Manhattan was inspired early on by locally grown, farm fresh cooking. Here is his savory smoked bluefish with dressed micro-greens and Greek yogurt dill.

- 2 pound skin-on, boneless bluefish fillet
- 3 red onions, thinly sliced
- 1 bunch each dill, parsley and thyme, roughly chopped
- 5 crushed bay leaves
- 1/2 cup brined green peppercorns, rinsed and

crushed

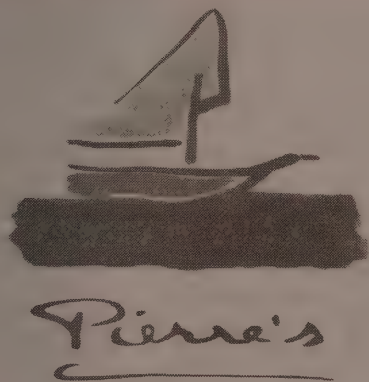

- 1 cup kosher salt
- 3/4 cup sugar
- Apple wood chips for smoking
- 1/4 cup Canola oil

1. Rinse fish fillet and dry with paper towel. Score the skin at 3-inch intervals and place in a non-reactive pan such as a Pyrex lasagna pan large enough to hold the fish in one layer. Mix the onions, herbs, bay leaves, peppercorns, kosher salt and sugar in a bowl. Spread half the mixture in the pan and place the fish, skin-side down, over the mixture. Spread the remaining mixture evenly over the top of the fish. Cover pan with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 24 hours. Remove the cured fish from pan, rinse thoroughly and dry with paper towels. Rinse and dry the pan; put the fish back in the pan and refrigerate, uncovered, for 24 hours longer to dry.

2. Smoke the fish with the apple wood chips for two hours at 150°F. The fish should have a pleasing firmness and an amber color. If it doesn't continue to smoke the fish until it does. Refrigerate the fish immediately. After an hour coat the fish with the oil and wrap in plastic wrap until ready to serve.

Restaurant Review: Squiretown Restaurant & Bar

By Stacy Dermont

Squiretown Restaurant & Bar, is a modern American bistro in Hampton Bays, across from Scotto's Pork Store. Squiretown's owners, brothers Craig and Chef Charles Bishop, worked with local interior designer Cheryl Gasser to create a welcoming, beachy atmosphere. The ceiling is a pale sky blue; walls of layered beige descend into sand-like colors in the banquettes and flooring. Lighting is subtle. Attention to detail is evident, as is the friendly atmosphere. The tables are dressed in white tablecloths, accented by simple arrangements of Gerber daisies. The music was a funky mix of easy listening tunes.

My dining partner summed it up best when she described Squiretown's menu as having "a comfort food edge." There is a welcome emphasis on fun.

We started with a generous appetizer of tender steamed mussels and a "Beet Box." I'm a huge fan of beets and I was blown away. It's a large, sweet beet roasted to tenderness, carved into a round box with a lid, and piped with dollops of yummy parsnip and celery root purees inside and out, artfully and generously sprinkled with fresh bleu cheese chunks.

Mojito Blues, a rum-based, fresh blueberry and lime cocktail, was really delicious and not too sweet. I only stopped after one so I could remember my meal.

Squiretown's orzo offering was described as "cooked in rich lobster broth with chunks of lobster plus corn and basil." That it was and more. Squiretown orders its seafood from Cor-J Seafood each morning, so the menu varies a bit but the freshness is consistent. That was some fresh lobster and utterly fresh, sweet, local corn off the cob. One of our two servers, Derek, gave me a soup spoon (in addition to my fork) in order to scoop up the broth. I ate the whole entrée with that big spoon. It was buttery-good without being heavy and the corn was cooked perfectly.

For dessert we chose from a selection of goodies all prepared "in house, from scratch" by "Aunt Denise." We were a little curious about whose aunt Denise it was, but after sampling her work we decided to make her our Aunt Denise. The Flourless Chocolate Cake was a very dark chocolate with a remarkable crumb for its flourlessness.

The "Elvis Woulda" is, "Peanut butter cream inside chocolate cake, banana caramel sauce and a dollop of marshmallow fluff. Yes, he woulda." Who wouldn't? It was really terrific, especially that pool of sauce.

I could go on and on, but I need to call 723-2626 to book my next reservation at Squiretown – they're now open for lunch and dinner seven days a week. My husband will want to try their steak, I think I need to try their "Veg Plate" and an Elderflower cocktail. In addition to the quality of their work, I appreciate their approach, "everything is as local as possible" and that includes the water. You have a choice of bottled or tap water. Come on in, the water's fine.

COMPOTE AND AMARETTI

Mark Gerlach, pastry chef at Nick & Toni's, cooled us with his luscious house-made lemon gelato with blackberry compote and crushed amaretti. Mark, a graduate of the French Culinary Institute in New York City, holds a Grand Diploma in both pastry arts and International Bread Baking.

For the Blackberry Compote

1 pint blackberries

About 1/4 cup sugar, according to the sweetness of the berries

2 teaspoons crystallized ginger, chopped fine

1 vanilla bean scraped or 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract

Pinch salt

To serve

1 pint lemon gelato or sorbet

1/4 cup Chambord

1/3 cup crushed amaretti

1. Place the ingredients for the blackberry compote in a bowl and allow to macerate for a minimum of one hour. Taste to correct for sweetness as necessary and chill until ready to serve.

2. To serve: Scoop a large ball of gelato or sorbet into a wine or martini glass. Divide the compote evenly over the gelato, drizzle a bit of Chambord over each serving and top with crushed amaretti.

Restaurant Review: Race Lane

By Susan M. Galardi

Having dinner at Race Lane, the new restaurant in East Hampton that has taken over the classic Norman Jaffee-designed space once occupied by Laundry and then The Lodge, was a revelation about what it means to max the potential.

The restaurant can be summed up in a song. "Moonlight in Vermont" to be exact, which was playing in the background the night we went. The version featured Ella Fitzgerald with Louis Armstrong on trumpet and adding to her vocals. The combination was substantial yet elegant—a delicate, ethereal melody riffing on a classic tune.

How does this translate into food? The menu at Race Lane features classics: things like prosciutto and melon, iceberg wedge with Roquefort; linguini with clams (cockles in this case), pork chops, Cornish hen and eggplant parmigiano — all classic favorites.

That's the substance. The ethereal quality comes from the recipes, created by husband and wife team owners Rowaida Younes and Jay Plumeri, with chef Alvarro Machado. Plumeri ran the River Café for many years, and owned 41 Greenwich among other spots. He met Machado along the way. This trio has a fine palate that translates in execution.

Of the appetizers and raw bar selections, ($8 to $16), we started with perfect cherrystones and a platter of scallop carpaccio — thin rounds of sea scallops dressed with slivers of mild jalapeno and scallion, and rock salt. The lemon juice and olive oil glistened atop the snowy scallops, and the slivers of green made it pop. The combination was crazy good.

The tuna tartare was the flip side: a pile of ahi chunks mixed with bits of radish and seasoned with smoky sesame oil, fresh scallion, earthy soy sauce. I prefer a more finely chopped tartare, but the flavors were winners.

I've rarely met a fish taco I didn't like, but this was a love affair. Race Lane's version presents small pieces of lightly grilled wahoo, a fish from the Caribbean, dressed with finely shredded red cabbage, cilantro and lime. It almost seemed like a ceviche. It was served with a mound of delicious guacamole.

From the bar menu, we tried fried calamari coated with flour and a bit of cornmeal. This took me back to the fritto mistos of coastal Italy: not only rings, but the little leggings too, as well as fried zucchini stick, served with a side of mild marinara. Amazingly, this dish retained its crunch, flavor and texture even when it got cold.

Of main courses (mostly in the $20s), we tried baked salmon over sliced, richly flavored shi-take mushrooms. A minced fresh ginger in a soy glaze on top added heat and sweetness, and snow peas, sliced into thin diagonal rings, added crunch. A wonderful dish.

The special was soft-shell crabs hiding unsuccessfully under a delicate mound of shredded fried leek, in a sauce of butter, white wine, lemon and tarragon. Again, spot on combination.

The wonderful mac and cheese with crunchy chopped bacon featured al dente elbow macaroni in a sauce of three cheeses, with a little mound of diced tomatoes in the middle.

We ended the meal with just one dessert: a perfect chocolate mousse.

The wine list at Race Lane is considerable and varied, with many great choices by the glass and the bottle.

The redesign of the space has rendered it clean and open while retaining the architecture. The top of the space has been opened up, the heavy ugly ductwork eliminated or disguised; the wood paneling has been painted a light grey. The color scheme combines deep pumpkin leather banquetts, with blue/grey fabric backs. The new owners knocked out a wall between the interior dining room and courtyard to connect the two spaces visually. Applause to the team for this great addition to East Hampton dining.

Race Lane, 31 Race Lane, East Hampton. 324-5022. Open seven days. Lunch Mon - Fri/Brunch Sat. & Sunday. Dinner until 11 p.m. Mon.-Wed., until midnight Thurs - Sat; and until 10 on Sunday. 1 1/2 lb. Lobster special, Mon. - Wed., 5-7 p.m., $25. Winedown Wednesdays: 40% off bottles of wine priced $50 or more. racelanerestaurant.com

Celebrating the Art Barge

The Art Barge circa 1960

By Sylvia M. Ender

The Victor D'Amico Institute of Art, also known as "The Art Barge," is celebrating 50 years of art education in the Hamptons.

I first picked up an Art Barge catalog last summer and stashed it away "for future reference." I attended business school and spent 20+ years in finance and computers. I had no art background whatsoever, and never even picked up a paintbrush until this year. This summer, first I signed up for the very fun collage class, and then the painting studio. It was there I discovered one could actually learn to paint at this hidden gem in the sand dunes of the Napeague stretch in Amagansett.

Victor D'Amico was the Director of Education at the Museum of Modern Art in Manhattan from 1937 until 1970. His philosophy was based on a fundamental faith in the creative potential of every man, woman and child. He said that "arts are a humanizing force and their major function is to vitalize living." He also believed that "people are more precious than products and the effectiveness of the arts can be measured by the zest they impart to society." D'Amico was not only a remarkable artist and teacher, but a visionary and pioneer of modern art education.

In 1955, under D'Amico's direction, the Museum of Modern Art sponsored summer painting classes at Ashawagh Hall in East Hampton. D'Amico had a greater vision for these classes, someplace "more dramatic and reflecting the character of the environment – sky, sea and salt air, either a boat, or resembling one." In addition to teaching technique, his aim was to bring amateurs, children, adults, artists, and teachers together in a stimulating setting in a natural environment.

D'Amico found his dream in a retired World War I Navy barge, abandoned in a Jersey City Harbor. Identified as "Barge #348," D'Amico purchased it for $500. In March of 1960, with the help of local baymen, he had it towed up the East River, through Hell's Gate and into Long Island Sound to the shore of Napeague Harbor in Amagansett.

The 500-ton barge was floated ashore at high tide, anchored in place with pilings, and a bulkhead was constructed. In 1965 a second story was added, creating additional studio space with gorgeous panoramic views of both Napeague Harbor and the Atlantic Ocean.

In the early years, studio painting and art teacher training classes were taught by D'Amico. Gradually other instructors joined him, including his wife, the artist and art teacher, Mabel D'Amico. In the years since Victor's death in 1987, local artist-teachers continued the classes which expanded to include mosaics, printing, fresco, and encaustic.

One of my painting classmates, Dr. Susan Goetz Zwiirn, believes the Art Barge is unique in the Hamptons not only for its light and beauty, but its timeless quality. She says, "Each summer for over 20 years, I am so happy when I arrive to see that it is unchanged, and a perfect venue to make art." Susan has taught art at the university level for over 20 years, and she is painting in the same studio as me, a complete novice. The Art Barge truly is for everyone.

For the 50th anniversary the staff is displaying an exhibition of photos and documentation covering their 50 years of art education. Also available are tours of Victor and Mabel D'Amico's nearby home and art studio. Mabel was not only an artist and art teacher, but also Head of the Art Department at Rye High School. Both Mabel and Victor mentored countless artists and art educators throughout their many years of hands-on teaching. Their fascinating residence (also located right on the water with a stunning view) is preserved as an exhibition center reserved for showing the D'Amico's life work. Free guided tours are given every Wednesday, lasting from 10:00 am to noon. Call the Art Barge at 631-267-3172 to make an reservation.

The Art Barge continues to offer studio painting, workshops for children, and a variety of workshops for adults in watercolor, pastel, ceramics, collage, 3-D mixed media, printing, drawing, encaustic, mosaics, and glass. Check their website for class schedules, fees, and directions, theartbarge.com.

HONORING THE ARTIST: LEROY NEIMAN

This week's cover by popular sports artist Leroy Neiman is a perfect example of his spirited style, love for animals and joie de vivre. For example, the color red seems to suggest Neiman's "energetic" setting and probably his worldview as well. Yet there's much more meaning in his work than initially meets the eye.

For example, the artist's style and subjects derive from diverse sources, including such art movements and painters as Fauvism, Abstract Expressionism, Impressionism, Cezanne and Toulouse-Lautrec (his impact and longevity). A case in point: the whimsy and spirit of the Fauves in his café and bar scenes are apparent, including a collage-like image where chefs and objects are superimposed in a chaotic but playful fashion. Other paintings are impressionistic. Consider the following celebrity images: football star, Joe Namath, with his head bent over; Tiger Woods taking a shot, fans and flowers blurred in the setting; Jackie Kennedy and Ari Onassis on a nude beach, their indistinguished figures blending in with other sunbathers.

Even Toulouse-Lautrec's influence is seen in the lively café settings with Neiman's celebration of neighborhood life. Yet Neiman captures other environments with a realistic style, little or no color and often no figures: "Pebble Beach Lodge" in black and white and "La Jolla Summer" with minimal flourishes. His "Femlin" drawings of a nude female for Playboy Magazine are black and white and minimal as well.

It's obvious from these varied works and styles that Neiman is a man with a great passion for life and the objects and people that inhabit it.

Q: You are known best for your sports-oriented images. Are they hard to do?

A: They are either difficult or easy or both. But I give all I can to everything I do.

Q: Are you a sports person yourself?

A: I was born and grew up in St. Paul, Minnesota, a town that has boxing, baseball, football, and auto racing.

Q: How about the source of your interest in art and formal training?

A: I study human behavior in a "pay-for-play" society. My formal training was due to the GI Bill; I went to the School of the Art Institute of Chicago where I also taught for 10 years.

Q: I notice you love animals.

A: Animal figures predominate in my work, from a tiny lapdog to a trumpeting elephant. I also love the creatures of the African Savannah.

Q: Do you have a particular story to tell about your experiences?

A: Early in Muhammad Ali's career, I was drawing him in his dressing room before the Oscar Bonavena fight in Madison Square Garden in 1970. He asked me to draw him in the dark. After four minutes, he yelled, "Time! You know you drew me just as I look. You draw me better in the dark." Ali had a wonderful sense of humor.

Altar Boyz

By Roy Bradbrook

This season at Gateway is nothing if not interesting – being a season ticket holder must be like being a Mets fan, you never know what kind of team (in this case show) is going to come out onto the field. After the fun and flash of Hairspray and with the anticipation of a spectacular Hello Dolly coming up next month, comes the Gateway production of the successful off-Broadway show Altar Boyz that demonstrates why the original never made it to the major leagues.

It seems that Christianity and the Catholic Church in particular are often seen by the creative world as being fair game for ridicule in the cause of art – one can only wonder what the reaction would be to a musical that poked fun at the Islamic faith or used its sacred objects and books as stage props. Even if you look beyond this and focus on the book, lyrics, music and performances, by any standards this is not a good show or one worthy of the Gateway tradition of excellence.

The story line is of a Christian boys' band from Ohio about to perform its final concert of a singing tour. It is staged in a face-to-face mode with the audience, as the Boyz seek to save the souls of those members of the audience who are in need. The show must go on until the "Soul Sensor" displayed high above the stage records zero. Thankfully the objective is achieved and even more thankfully it does not take very long.

The cast of five works very hard, dancing vigorously and enthusiastically. They are on stage virtually the whole show. The final denouement was one of the better parts of the evening. There are moments when a one-liner or a double entendre tantalizingly indicate how a better-written book might have transformed the whole show.

The funniest part of the evening came for me when a lady seated behind me plaintively said to her colleagues at the interval, "I thought we were going to see something nice rather like that Vienna Boys Choir, with those beautiful young voices!"

Because it did run so long off-Broadway, it seems that there must be an audience demographic that this show fits – frankly, I don't think that it is the demographic of those who are regular patrons of Gateway Playhouse.

Reverting to my baseball analogies, as a devoted Yankees fan I know that even the almost perfect Mariano Rivera can occasionally blow a save. Let's hope that Gateway does what Mariano always does and make a great comeback for the rest of the season.

Altar Boyz runs through July 31 at Bellport and then the next show is Hello Dolly at the Patchogue Theatre, running August 4 – 22. Gatewayplayhouse.com.

Art Commentary Plein Air Peconic at Southampton Historical

by Marion Wolberg Weiss

Casey Chalem Anderson, "Dune Beach Morning"

It's quite appropriate that the annual landscape exhibition by Plein Air Peconic should be at the Southampton Historical Museum. Located in a Greek Revival building complete with beautiful grounds, the Museum immediately becomes an homage to local history, just as works by artists celebrate the area's history through their depictions of fields, ponds, and farms. Plein Air Peconic is a cohesive group of painters and photographers who regularly paint outdoors (often together). The group serves as a creative and supportive outlet for the artists, and a vehicle devoted to historical documentation.

Members may not consider themselves historians – after all, they are visual artists first and foremost. Yet they have been recording the regional landscape for years on end, even though this recording involves the artists' own individual style, medium and perspective. What connects all these different works, however, is an overwhelming respect for the land and a fervent desire to maintain its beauty, even if only through images. (We are all aware of the disappearances of sacred fields due to "progress" and building construction.)

The current exhibit, "Saving Our Landscape

Heritage," is a noteworthy mix of iconic images characterizing local landscape and subtle shifts in "history." The traditional scenes are favorite places we may all know well or have passed without acknowledgment. Some settings are part of our lives: views we can see out of our windows or venues we often frequent. In a word, the works on display are personal.

A particular image functions as a personal one for this critic: Susan D'Alessio's "Pike's Farmstand." Driven to it by a perfect stranger buying stamps at the Wainscott Post Office, the farm stand has become a comfortable place where locals and a few celebrities mingle as though they are old friends. Older visiting relatives get a kick out of selecting vegetables there, recalling decades past in rural America when there was hardly anything but produce stands. Even so, the farm stand probably won't last another summer; the landlord is selling off the property, and the Pikes can't afford to buy it.

Another image signifies the same message of a bygone era: an old truck in the field by Aubrey Grainger, called aptly "Farm Truck." The object is imbued with nearly mythic properties, and we wonder about its history and owners. Tom Steele's "International Truck" is a closer view of a similar object, a colorful vehicle suggesting an equally colorful past.

Farms as a whole are also celebrated, including Kathryn Szoka's "Hendrickson Farm," where Szoka's signature evocative lighting and composition (in this case geometric) convey an arresting mood. Gordon Matheson's "Bridgehampton Barns" is similar in feeling, with the buildings' compositional elements being emphasized.

Other terrains are given personalities by the artists' use of color and point-of-view. Consider the iconic vineyards that dot our landscape, such as Eileen Dawn

Kathryn Szoka, "Hendrickson Farm"

Skretch's "Tents in Vineyard," in which impressionistic forms establish a dreamlike atmosphere.

Dunes, beaches and marshes complete the topography covered in this arresting presentation. Such subjects represent specific sites but are meant to be universal as well:

Michele Margit's "Dune Marsh," Casey Chalem Anderson's "Dune Beach Morning," where Anderson's glorious colors reign, and Joanne Rosko's "Dunes," where a "you-are-there" feeling prevails.

Yet there are a few sites that are specific, like in Gail Kern's "Back Fields Breeze Hill," where the road leads the viewer to an unknown place, and Ellen Watson's "Cooks Lane," which offers a mysterious scene with huge clouds and a field in the foreground.

We may know this place, no doubt, but the artist shows it in a different way.

Hats off to our landscape artists.

North Fork

The Top 6 Things You Forgot To Have On Your Boat

By David Lion Rattiner

Boating is one of the great pleasures of living out on the North Fork. The pristine waters here are the best in the world. Billionaires, who at the snap of a finger can fly anywhere they wish, choose here to sail and motor their boats around the bay. The reason is the pristine water, the exceptional fishing and the wide array of places that you can visit for a day while at sea. It is truly pure magic to fish off Montauk or in Gardiner's Bay, and it is amazing to see places like Shelter Island's sunset beach by boat, or to pull up to a restaurant by boat to order a spread of seafood to eat.

But on a boat, there are many things that are important to have on board. Lifejackets and flares are obvious items, so are radios and paddles. Fire extinguishers are required by law, as well as many other items, but there are some items that are not required by law, however they can make a whirlwind of difference when out at sea. Here are the top six.

6. All Weather Clothes – It doesn't matter what they look like, but you should always have one of your storage compartments filled to the brim with sweat-shirts, jackets, raincoats, and whatever else is warm that is sitting in your closet and you never use anymore. Weather can change quick on the water, and there will always be somebody on board who didn't think brining a jacket was worth the trouble.

5. A Few Gallon Jugs of Water – When you are out at sea, you are surrounded by sea water, and most likely, you brought a bottle of water with you and maybe even a six-pack, but if you run out of your bottled water and need fresh water, you have no place to turn. It's always smart to have a two gallon jug of water on board, hidden away, for emergency use. Maybe a friend of yours catches heat exhaustion and needs to hydrate. Maybe you are feeling too salty and need a splash. Or maybe your engine died, and you are going to be out at sea longer than you anticipated. Whatever it is, water is fundamental. You may be able to fish for food to get you through the night, but going without water when you want it can be scary. Always just keep a gallon on board.

4. Standard First Aid Kit – You'd be surprised how important this thing is when your buddy hooks his finger instead of a bass. You'd also be surprised how few people keep first aid kits on their boats. Cuts happen on boats more frequently than most places. It's always good to keep one of these kits someplace safe.

3. Ziplock Bags – Ziplock bags you ask? Yes. Ziplock bags solve an unbelievable amount of problems on a boat, from storing cell phones and cameras safely and keeping them from getting wet, to keeping the food you brought dry, to keeping your jewelry dry. If you need to swim an item from one area to another and not get it wet, Ziplock bags solve your problem. And there are plenty of scenarios where you have to swim to get to where you want to go. Matches and lighters can be stored. Maybe you anchored off the beach and are swimming to shore for a picnic, or to get to a fun bar with no marina.

2. Tools – No matter what kind of boat you have, whether it's a little Boston Whaler or a little sailboat, to a large boat, keeping tools on board is an absolute must. A standard tool kit from K-Mart should suffice and can be stored anywhere. Tools are hugely important on a boat, whether it's something silly like using pliers to cut a fishing line, to when you really need them, like when your steering bolt comes loose and you need a 1/8 wrench to tighten the bolt.

1. Extra Flashlights With Extra Batteries – Night time can fall upon you quick on a boat. It's easy to lose track of time and next thing you know, you are in the dark. The last thing you want is to be stuck with a flashlight that has a weak lamp thanks to a dying battery. Flashlights will also make your guests feel more comfortable in the dark, which is a big bonus as well.

There are plenty of other things that you want to keep on board such as a basic AM/FM radio, nautical charts, and spare lines, but the last top six will really make a difference next time you are out at sea.

OLE' MACKIE IS BACK!

Dear Dan,

Dan, there are a few of us "oldies" Bobby Darin fans looking to join other Bobby fans to just get together, talk about Bobby, share memorabilia, share good times regarding Bobby. If anyone is interested, and I know there are, please contact me at eahalsey@aol.com

I am a member of a global Darin fan club, but would like to get something started here. Bobby will be 75 yrs. old next May 14 and last year "Mack the Knife" won the Grammy for Best Song 50 years ago, and Bobby won it for Best New Performer. It was the first time that particular Grammy was given out. This year he finally won the Lifetime Achievement Award. Next year during the month of May we are hoping to get the Balaggio in Las Vegas to play Bobby songs with their dancing fountains.

We had a star put down in front of the Flamingo for Bobby when they started the Vegas Walk of Stars. It was completely paid for by his fans.

Also this year, a scholarship in Bobby's name was given to the most accomplished student in music at The Bronx High School of Science. This scholarship was begun several years ago, and we have resurrected it. I think it was the one started by Ralph Edwards of "This is Your Life."

Thanks.

E.A. Halsey

FAIR TRADING

Dear Dan,

After your wonderful reading last weekend, I mentioned to you the possibility of your doing an article on the World Village Fair Trade Store in Hamptons Bays.

This market is a member of the Fair Trade Federation - a network of organizations who believe in the power of commerce as a force for good. With half the world's population living on less than $2 per day, this shop is an avenue for artisans from more than 25 developing countries to sell their hand-crafted goods at a fair price. This gives these people a chance to support themselves and their families and live in dignity.

I think you will be impressed by the beautiful articles they have and the wonderful volunteers who are dedicated to this work. I would love to see them receive some coverage from your well-respected newspaper, thus increasing the volume of people who know about them and come to shop.

They are located at: 101-4 Montauk Highway, Hamlet Greet Shopping Center, Hampton Bays - 631-728-7880. Eileen, Patty or Gretchen would be most helpful.

And may I add, I look forward to every issue of Dan's Papers. Happy Summer!

Hope this helps. - DR.

TREES AND HOUSES

Dear Dan,

I enjoyed your "Woods or Downs" story in your recent edition. Always wondered where all the trees came from. This is a late 1940's picture of my home on Grant Drive in the Hither Hills section of Montauk. The house sits about 3/10 mile up from old Montauk Highway. Today, and I think you know the area, its nothing but trees (and a few more houses).

THROWING STONES

Dear Dan,

Yes, BP President Tony Hayward racing his yacht during this crisis in the Gulf of Mexico is wrong. Equally disappointing were President Obama and Vice President Biden playing golf. Since April 20, how many days have Obama, Biden and Congress been off during this crisis? Upon assuming office, President Obama could have issued Executive Orders reforming any alleged past improper rules and regulations favoring the oil industry under President Bush. Obama Cabinet and other administration appointees have had 18 months to clean house. The real problem is that oil industry Washington "K" Street lobbyists have influence via campaign donations over just as many Democrats as Republicans in Congress. As a result, President Obama, Senate leader Harry Reid and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi have been unable to separate "Big Oil's" influence from government agencies responsible for industry regulation. Many foreign nations have offered assistance, which the White House has yet to accept.

Those who live in glass houses have no business throwing stones.

Sincerely,

Larry Penner

It's all about oil, unfortunately. - DR

IN THE INTEREST OF ACCURACY

Dear Dan,

As a former resident of Brussels, I must inform you that Flanders (July 9, page 44) is in Belgium, not France. Flanders Field with rows of poppies is indeed in Belgium. And 'Les Flammands', about whom Belgian Jacques Brel sang so eloquently, would be deeply offended to be relegated to France.

Thanks,

Sarah Engel

Police Blotter

Ummm...Okay...

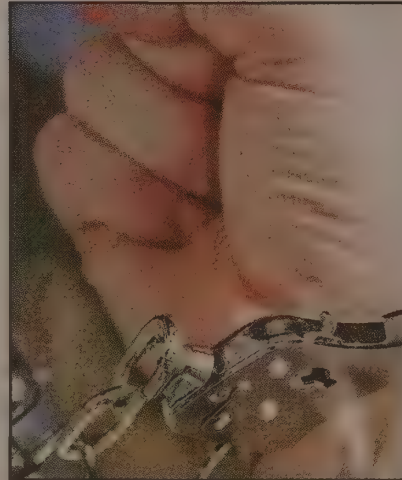

A father in Montauk was arrested after he punched his daughter in the face and then began to kick her while she was down on the ground. Police arrived after the incident and his wife explained to police that she pulled him off her daughter. The daughter had extensive injuries to her face. Way to be a winner out there in Montauk and do right by your family, what a big, tough, strong man you are.

Back To Being Funny

A man in East Hampton walked out of a bar drunk and into the backseat of a police vehicle, believing that it was his friend's car. In the words of the price-line.com negotiator, "WRONG MOVE!" Luckily, his friend, a designated driver, was found, and took him home.

I Hope That Didn't Hurt

A woman who was sunbathing in Montauk, face down, was run over by a man driving a truck on the beach, who told police that he wasn't trying to hit her, but trying to get out of the way of children who were playing in the beach and ran over her accidentally because he didn't see her. Hmmm, maybe you should of, I don't know, STOPPED when you saw children and were driving your huge ass truck on the beach in Montauk. How does a truck even fit on those beaches, they're small!

Hey! Michael Lohan! Nobody Cares! Wait, You Did What?

Michael Lohan, Linday Lohan's Dad, known for trying to steal the spotlight away from his daughter through a variety of stunts, has finally earned my attention after he was charged with harassment. His fiancée called police and said he flipped over a sofa chair he was sitting in and threw a shoe at her face at their house in Water Mill. Congrats Michael, you finally made a headline! Or a blurb in the best police blotter on earth.

Shelter Island

It was quiet. Too quiet. Strangely quiet on Shelter Island. Old Man McGumbus, 97, put on his World War II helmet while wearing his bathrobe and headed outside with a flashlight and a golf club, his nine iron, his favorite. Scared, confused, but brave as ever, he searched and searched and then, he discovered why no sound was being made on Shelter Island, which normally provided at the very least, the sound of a cricket. It was his hearing aid, it was out of battery power. He headed back inside, took one look out his second story window, and shut the shade. Today you may rest McGumbus, he said to himself, but you must be prepared for tomorrow.
